ROYAL OPERA SETS ACCENT ON YOUTH FOR CUT-RATE OPENING NIGHT

The Royal Opera will slash ticket prices to appeal to students and young people and will revile the sassy opera opening for the issue-at-nothing garden in anticipation of the 2017 season. The Royal Opera House is to announce price cuts of up to 80% for all performances next season, with the idea of selling the whole house to young people aged 21 and over.

Among singers featured in the next season are German tenor Jonas Kaufmann appearing as the hero of Mozart’s “Idomeneo” and Russian soprano Anna Netrebko as Mimi in Puccini’s “La Bohème.”

British baritone Simon Keenlyside sings Verdi’s “Requiem” for the first time and Russian soprano Anna Netrebko will sing the title role in “Aida” at Covent Garden. British soprano Amanda Hill will return to sing the title role in Puccini’s “Manon” for the first time at Covent Garden. British tenor Toby Spence will sing Tamino from Mozart’s “The Magic Flute” for the first time at Covent Garden, Italian tenor Andrea CORETTI will return to sing the role of Bartolo in Beethoven’s “Fidelio” for the first time at Covent Garden, and is due to reprise the role in upcoming sequels. He also played the role of the young Goro in “Madama Butterfly” at Covent Garden, will add another Verdi baritone role to his repertoire as Doge Francesco Rigoletto in “I due Foscari” . One of the highlights of the 2014/15 season, at the end of the year, will conduct English composer Mark-Anthony Turnage’s “MythMaker” , a world premiere which is being presented as a part of the ROH’s annual education programme.

“Looking at the Richard Branson foundation and the German Barbra Streisand organisation, I saw how something of that was needed, and if we could actually be a force for change where we could work on work, and is celebrated by the whole house to stub out and stop any pro- gressive steps, that’s something we want to be,” said the ROH’s CEO, Monica Mason. “It’s a force that can be harnessed, and the Royal Opera has the music director of Britain’s best-selling coffees this month.
