Sarcasm and mockery are prominent in Kuwaiti youth expressions on social media, which can be a means for criticizing and demanding more freedom of expression because they can already criticize and express their opinions more freely than any previous generation. They are now calling on top officials on their Twitter accounts on a daily basis without being threatened or held legally accountable. Cyber activists in Kuwait are using Twitter to protest against the government, and the best proof of this is that many of them do not even have Twitter accounts, and even if they do, those accounts are so humble in terms of the number of followers compared to many young Kuwaitis who are being followed more than the number of followers compared to many young Kuwaitis.

One of the main reasons why the youth have abandoned the opposition is that leadership is on top of the pyramid. These leaders include people with long legacies and history in political life, even though they are stuck in outdated technology. They are outdated in terms of modern technology that has come into being. The reason for that is that they are still stuck to old methods and their rallies have been affected by Fawzi's hearing's results. Upon a request from the government, the same MP was physically assaulted which parliament members offend state employees with. The same MP had physically assaulted which parliament members offend state employees with.
