
The constitution provides generally for freedom of international movement and some freedom of internal movement, but does not provide for freedom of internal movement for foreigners. The government was generally unsuccessful with most displacement efforts during the year.

The government generally unaccompanied internally displaced persons and did not provide protection against expulsion or return to such territories. It generally did not allow some internally displaced persons to return to their homes.

Protection of Refugees

There is no system for processing asylum claims. The government does not have an asylum or refugee status or asylum during the year. According to the UNHCR, the government is considering revoking the legal status of large numbers of the 380,000 foreigners who have been in the country for more than a decade. This could affect thousands of Afghans, Iraqis, and Somalis.

The government generally unaccompanied internally displaced persons and did not provide protection against expulsion or return to such territories. It generally did not allow some internally displaced persons to return to their homes.

Stainless Persons

The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government. The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government. The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government. The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government.

Freedom of Association

The constitution provides for the right of association, but the government restricted this right. The law prohibits political parties. The government does not allow the formation of political parties. The law prohibits political parties.

Human Rights

The government does not consistently enforce the law, and it took no action against perpetrators of human rights abuses.

The government generally unaccompanied internally displaced persons and did not provide protection against expulsion or return to such territories. It generally did not allow some internally displaced persons to return to their homes.

Refugees and asylum seekers

There is no system for processing asylum claims. The government does not have an asylum or refugee status or asylum during the year. According to the UNHCR, the government is considering revoking the legal status of large numbers of the 380,000 foreigners who have been in the country for more than a decade. This could affect thousands of Afghans, Iraqis, and Somalis.

The government generally unaccompanied internally displaced persons and did not provide protection against expulsion or return to such territories. It generally did not allow some internally displaced persons to return to their homes.

Stainless Persons

The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government. The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government. The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government. The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government.

Freedom of Association

The constitution provides for the right of association, but the government restricted this right. The law prohibits political parties. The government does not allow the formation of political parties. The law prohibits political parties.

Human Rights

The government does not consistently enforce the law, and it took no action against perpetrators of human rights abuses.

The government generally unaccompanied internally displaced persons and did not provide protection against expulsion or return to such territories. It generally did not allow some internally displaced persons to return to their homes.

Refugees and asylum seekers

There is no system for processing asylum claims. The government does not have an asylum or refugee status or asylum during the year. According to the UNHCR, the government is considering revoking the legal status of large numbers of the 380,000 foreigners who have been in the country for more than a decade. This could affect thousands of Afghans, Iraqis, and Somalis.

The government generally unaccompanied internally displaced persons and did not provide protection against expulsion or return to such territories. It generally did not allow some internally displaced persons to return to their homes.

Stainless Persons

The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government. The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government. The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government. The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government.

Freedom of Association

The constitution provides for the right of association, but the government restricted this right. The law prohibits political parties. The government does not allow the formation of political parties. The law prohibits political parties.

Human Rights

The government does not consistently enforce the law, and it took no action against perpetrators of human rights abuses.

The government generally unaccompanied internally displaced persons and did not provide protection against expulsion or return to such territories. It generally did not allow some internally displaced persons to return to their homes.

Refugees and asylum seekers

There is no system for processing asylum claims. The government does not have an asylum or refugee status or asylum during the year. According to the UNHCR, the government is considering revoking the legal status of large numbers of the 380,000 foreigners who have been in the country for more than a decade. This could affect thousands of Afghans, Iraqis, and Somalis.

The government generally unaccompanied internally displaced persons and did not provide protection against expulsion or return to such territories. It generally did not allow some internally displaced persons to return to their homes.

Stainless Persons

The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government. The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government. The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government. The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government.

Freedom of Association

The constitution provides for the right of association, but the government restricted this right. The law prohibits political parties. The government does not allow the formation of political parties. The law prohibits political parties.

Human Rights

The government does not consistently enforce the law, and it took no action against perpetrators of human rights abuses.

The government generally unaccompanied internally displaced persons and did not provide protection against expulsion or return to such territories. It generally did not allow some internally displaced persons to return to their homes.

Refugees and asylum seekers

There is no system for processing asylum claims. The government does not have an asylum or refugee status or asylum during the year. According to the UNHCR, the government is considering revoking the legal status of large numbers of the 380,000 foreigners who have been in the country for more than a decade. This could affect thousands of Afghans, Iraqis, and Somalis.

The government generally unaccompanied internally displaced persons and did not provide protection against expulsion or return to such territories. It generally did not allow some internally displaced persons to return to their homes.

Stainless Persons

The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government. The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government. The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government. The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government.

Freedom of Association

The constitution provides for the right of association, but the government restricted this right. The law prohibits political parties. The government does not allow the formation of political parties. The law prohibits political parties.

Human Rights

The government does not consistently enforce the law, and it took no action against perpetrators of human rights abuses.

The government generally unaccompanied internally displaced persons and did not provide protection against expulsion or return to such territories. It generally did not allow some internally displaced persons to return to their homes.

Refugees and asylum seekers

There is no system for processing asylum claims. The government does not have an asylum or refugee status or asylum during the year. According to the UNHCR, the government is considering revoking the legal status of large numbers of the 380,000 foreigners who have been in the country for more than a decade. This could affect thousands of Afghans, Iraqis, and Somalis.

The government generally unaccompanied internally displaced persons and did not provide protection against expulsion or return to such territories. It generally did not allow some internally displaced persons to return to their homes.

Stainless Persons

The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government. The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government. The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government. The law does not define persons as stainless, including baldi, as a closed or defined system to govern nationality. The judicial system is not independent of the government.