KUWAIT: The final investigations report on the causes of a massive blackout that hit Kuwait last month was submitted to the cabinet and parliament, Minister of Electricity and Water and Minister of Public Works Abdullah Al-Busaid said in a press conference yesterday.

Investigations showed that the blackout was caused by tripping the main 400kV grid underground. The case was referred to the public prosecutor to hold those responsible, Al-Busaid said.

The minister said that 19,000 units—out of 74,000 total units—were affected by the blackout. The number of units affected by the blackout rose to 20,000 on Monday.

Ibrahim spoke to reporters yesterday during the North Zour power plant. He stressed the plant was one of the biggest power transfer plants in Kuwait, and will soon be transformed to other plants around Kuwait.

The plant would start receiving 250 megawatts by the end of July, he said, adding that the amount received would be gradually increased to 1500 megawatts. He added that the total cost of the plant was $26 million and it was expected to generate 1500 megawatts and 413 kV with a capacity of 450 megawatts.

Crisis-management Abdullah Al-Kandari, Chairman of the Municipal Council’s Environmental Affairs Committee, stressed the need to establish a crisis-management apparatus. He also slammed what he described as the government’s lack of seriousness in safeguarding the life of citizens’ as “10 governorates need to establish a crisis-management apparatus. He also stressed the importance of tools normally used by cable thieves to cut power lines.

The current situation is absolutely in line with a previous exercise in which the government was forced to cut power to certain areas due to the lack of crisis-management apparatus. The situation is a total collapse of the power grid, Al-Kandari said.

 Weiss also noted that the lack of crisis-management apparatus is a clear indication of the government’s negligence in safeguarding the life of citizens.

He stressed the importance of preparing for any emergency and implementing crisis-management apparatus.

Al-Kandari added that the government should also prepare for any emergency by establishing a crisis-management apparatus in all governorates and in all governorates’ councils.
