Migrant chaos in Croatia

See Page 10

A man carrying a baby is let through a police cordon amid scuffles between migrants and Croatian police officers in Tovarnik, Croatia, yesterday. Hundreds of migrants have pushed through police lines in the eastern Croatian town of Tovarnik, with people trampling and falling on each other amid the chaos, as more than 2,000 men, women and children were stuck at the local train station for hours in blazing heat and sun on yesterday, waiting to board trains and buses for transport to refugee centers. — AP
