MALAYSIAN STUDENTS RALLY TO DEMAND PM RAZAK’S ARREST

MALAYSIA: The images of university students holding up the Liberty Torch in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, were put to the test by the university authorities and led to the arrest of 43 students. They were protesting against the government’s plan to introduce a new law that could lead to the imposition of fines and jail terms for those who use the torch.

The protest was held on the eve of the 58th anniversary of the country’s independence and was part of a series of demonstrations held across the country to demand the resignation of Prime Minister Najib Razak.

The students were protesting against the government’s decision to ban the use of the torch, which is associated with the student movement and democracy in the country.

The student protesters had gathered at the Kuala Lumpur Institute of Languages and Technology, where they held a rally. They were joined by several hundred other supporters who had gathered outside the institute.

During the rally, the students called for Najib’s resignation and demanded that he step down as the prime minister. They also called for the release of the 43 students who had been arrested.

The police cordoned off the area and used tear gas and water cannons to disperse the protesters. At least 10 protesters were reportedly injured in the clashes.

The government has been under pressure to resign since a series of scandals erupted earlier in the year, including the alleged misappropriation of billions of dollars from a state investment fund, 1MDB.

Najib has denied the allegations and said the government is investigating the matter.

Meanwhile, the opposition leader Anwar Ibrahim has been released from jail after being held for five years on sexual offense charges. He has demanded that Najib step down and hold early elections.

The president of the Philippines, Rodrigo Duterte, has been widely criticized for his brutal war on drugs, which has led to the deaths of thousands of people. The United Nations has expressed concern about the violence and has called on the government to end its crackdown on drug users.

The Philippine government has defended its anti-drug campaign, saying it is necessary to curb the drug trade and protect the country.

Meanwhile, a group of activists has launched a hunger strike in Manila, saying they want the government to investigate reports of extrajudicial killings by the police.

The activists said they were fasting to demand justice for victims of the anti-drug campaign and to protest against the government’s failure to investigate the deaths of people who were killed in police operations.

The government has denied the allegations and said it is investigating the reports.

Meanwhile, the United States has imposed new sanctions on its officials, including the national security adviser, John Bolton, and the Treasury Department, in response to the country’s continued support for Iran.

The sanctions are part of an effort to pressure Iran to abandon its nuclear program and comply with international law.

Meanwhile, the United States has also imposed sanctions on its officials, including the national security adviser, John Bolton, and the Treasury Department, in response to the country’s continued support for Iran.

The sanctions are part of an effort to pressure Iran to abandon its nuclear program and comply with international law.

Meanwhile, the United States has imposed new sanctions on the country, including the financial sector, in response to its continued support for Iran.

The sanctions are part of an effort to pressure the country to abandon its nuclear program and comply with international law.

Meanwhile, the United States has also imposed sanctions on its officials, including the national security adviser, John Bolton, and the Treasury Department, in response to the country’s continued support for Iran.

The sanctions are part of an effort to pressure Iran to abandon its nuclear program and comply with international law.

Meanwhile, the United States has imposed new sanctions on the country, including the financial sector, in response to its continued support for Iran.

The sanctions are part of an effort to pressure the country to abandon its nuclear program and comply with international law.