

Lifestyle | Gossip

THE WEEKND ADOPTS PUPPY FOLLOWING GOMEZ SPLIT

The 'Starboy' hitmaker was left heartbroken when his former flame rekindled her relationship with her on/off ex Justin Bieber just days after they called time on their romance, but it looks like the 27-year-old singer has found companionship elsewhere as he has taken in a beautiful male Doberman Pinscher. The hunk uploaded a photograph of his new addition on his Instagram account but failed to give any other details - including his name, age, and where he came from. The Weeknd - whose real name is Abel Tesfaye - reportedly dumped Selena following almost a year of dating last month because they'd barely seen each other. Shortly afterwards, Selena, 25, and Justin - who dated on and off from 2011 to 2015 - reportedly reconciled after recently spending time together. An insider said: "Selena and Justin are back together."

"Selena and The Weeknd just fizzled and ended amicably - it wasn't dramatic and it wasn't about Justin. But Selena always had feelings for Justin." However, Selena's pals are said to be hoping she treads carefully with the 23-year-old star because she is "in a good place" after undergoing a kidney transplant. The insider added: "Her friends want her to be cautious because she has been in such a good place post-surgery." The Weeknd previously dated model Bella Hadid from May 2015 but their romance was short lived as they split that December. However, there was obviously still some chemistry there as they decided to give their romance another go before calling it quits for good in November last year.

Daisy Ridley is dating Tom Bateman

The 25-year-old actress and the handsome star reportedly hit it off while filming their current movie 'Murder on the Orient Express' but, although they were keen to keep their romance under wraps for a little while longer, the film's producer has accidentally let slip that "something kinda happened" between them during shooting. Speaking on the red carpet at the film's premiere in London, according to the Daily Mirror newspaper, Judy Hofflund let slip: "Something kinda happened with Tom and Daisy... but that's public news, right? I should keep my mouth shut." But when pushed on whether the rumour was true, Tom, 28, skirted around the question and claimed the producers just like to "create a buzz" sometimes. Daisy - who previously dated Charlie Hamblett - refused to comment last month when she was asked by press whether she had a man on the scene. She coyly replied at the time: "I'm not saying." However, she once revealed that the late great Carrie Fisher - who passed away two days after Christmas last year - gave her some dating advice by telling her stardom would impact her search for love and that her personal life would be complicated. Carrie - who played the role of Princess Leia in the sci-fi movies - told her before her passing: "It's hard to date once you're a 'Star Wars' star because you don't want to give people the ability to say, 'I had sex with Princess Leia'." Daisy then responded: "Someone asked me if I found it easier to date now because I'm in the film. I was like, 'What the hell?'"

HARRY JUDD'S BABY SON WAS RUSHED TO HOSPITAL

The McFly singer's wife Izzy took to her Instagram account on Friday night to give fans the lowdown on Kit's condition after she worried fans the day before when she uploaded a photograph of tiny tot with a hospital band around his leg. She wrote: "There's no place like Home. Thank you so much for all your caring and comforting messages. On Tuesday morning I was home alone with Lola and Kit suddenly deteriorated and started struggling for breath. I was terrified and had no option than to phone for an ambulance. The paramedics arrived within minutes, however those minutes were the longest and the worst of my life. Poor little man has bronchiolitis, a really nasty virus so needed help with his breathing and feeding. We are now home and I'm trying to recover from the trauma! Thank you again and I'm sending love and strength to all the parents out there with poorly bubba's tonight xxxx #ourhnsrocks #nhs (sic)" Her positive message came after she worried her followers a few hours before when she revealed the two-month-old baby was "really poorly" with a mystery illness. She said: "A seriously tough week... Kit has been a poorly boy and we ended up in hospital. The little man is doing better tonight and we're hoping to get home tomorrow. Whilst I sit by his bed I just want to take a moment to say how amazingly lucky we are to have the #nhs who in our hour of need came to our rescue. We have been looked after by the most amazing paramedics, doctors and beautifully caring nurses. A very frightening experience was eased by a very kind and reassuring nurse who held my hand when my little boy was very distressed."

Nicole Scherzinger has 'a few' televisions

The 'X Factor' judge rarely ever watches TV because she takes the programs too seriously so it is never a relaxing experience for her. She said: "I never watch TV. I wish I could but my brain just doesn't work like that. I take it all very seriously. I believe in everything that's going on and I end up crying or getting really angry. The only time I ever sit down and watch a box set is when I'm travelling on a plane. As an actress, it is important to stay on top of the things that are out there and to see how they're being filmed. I have a few televisions at home but I don't even know how they work." The 'Poison' hitmaker is finding renovations on her new home to be all-consuming at the moment because she's determined to get it finished after so long without a proper home. She told OK! magazine: "I've been without somewhere to live for two years because my last house flooded so I had to move out. I've built somewhere new in Los Angeles but it's a work in progress, there's still a lot to do. I recently had two weeks downtime so I used it to make as many decisions about the house as possible. It's all I can think about at the moment." The 39-year-old singer likes to cook and eat out, but when she's working on 'The X Factor', she has to be careful about what she eats because she "doesn't know" how to restrict herself to a small portion. She said: "I don't cook very often but when I do I make sure it's the best."

Megan Fox expects to be contacted by aliens

The 'Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles' actress - who has sons Noah, five, Bodhi, three, and 14-month-old Journey, and stepson Kassius, 15, with husband Brian Austin Green - has never felt like she fits in with the world so she's convinced she's one of the first people an otherworldly being would want to get in touch with. She said: "[There was always] a feeling I don't belong to anything - even to the world. Feeling apart, for me, has been exacerbated by fame. I think that's a lesson I've had to learn. I'm one of those people who thinks, if aliens are real, when they come back to earth I'm one of the humans they'll contact. It's me - I know it's gonna be me. I've always had that feeling." The 31-year-old beauty always felt like an outsider at school and admitted her classmates were "freaked out" by her quirky personality". She told Cosmopolitan magazine: "I wasn't popular. Everyone thought I was very strange - eccentric - and it freaked people out that my personality is the opposite of how I look." Megan isn't the only star interested in aliens, as Happy Mondays frontman Shaun Ryder previously claimed to have seen a "20ft by 10ft" space ship in his back garden whilst filming in South America. He said at the time: "We were filming in South America at the time. I remember I got back to my house at about 5am and I saw a craft outside my house. It was huge. Around 20ft by 10ft. It looked plastic - like a toy. I didn't believe it at first. I thought our production team were playing a trick on me. But nobody else saw it."

Kendall is "serious" about Blake Griffin

The 'Keeping Up With The Kardashians' star has been growing close to the basketball player and whilst they started off in a more "casual" romance, things are said to be heating up between the pair. A source told People magazine: "Kendall was in a great mood [at her party]. She and Blake hung out, but they also mingled separately ... Kendall is very happy with Blake. They started out more like friends, and then it was very casual. But it seems more serious lately. When they are not together, they keep in touch over the phone. Her family has accepted Blake. They are spending time getting to know him." It had previously been claimed that Kendall was enjoying "playing the field" by going on dates with Blake while still talking to her ex-boyfriend rapper A$AP Rocky, who she dated briefly last year. An insider said at the time: "Kendall and Blake have been hanging out quite a bit and are having a good time. They met in passing a few times and hit it off. She's still talking to Rocky as well. But he isn't the type to settle down or be a good boyfriend, so she's playing the field too. She's seeing Blake romantically. It's nothing serious. She has been in LA a lot lately, and is having fun. Work will soon take over her life again, so who knows what will happen will Blake then. She is having fun right now and that's all that matters to her. She takes her career very seriously and that's her number one priority right now. Kendall is keeping her options open. She's still dating A$AP Rocky as well, but she and Blake are hanging out, and there's potential there."

KELLY CLARKSON ISN'T BOTHERED BY CRITICISM

The 'Second Hand Heart' hitmaker has learned not to take any notice of those who try and tear her down and wants to show her children - River Rose, three, and 18-month-old son Remington Alexander - the importance of building an "armor of confidence" around them. She said: "[Criticism] does not bother me. I'm very fulfilled in my life ... I'm a mother and I care what is said to my kids and I want them to build an armor to wear, an armor of confidence." And the 35-year-old singer - who has River and Remington with her husband Brandon Blackstock - admits she has never felt "sexier" or more confident since she became a mother. Speaking to Willie Geist in an upcoming interview for Sunday Today, she added: "Becoming a mother and wife, I've never felt sexier, I've never felt more confident, I've never felt more empowered. I don't think you have to get married or have to have children to have those things to have those things, it's just that's what happened to me personally." It comes after Kelly admitted becoming a mother has made her worry about the "pettiness and trivial things a lot less". She shared: "It's so funny, because I talk to all my mom friends about this all the time. I've always been a confident girl, I've always felt sexy and intelligent. But after becoming a mother, the amount of st that you get done, you're so impressed with yourself! It's the most empowering feeling, because it makes you want to worry about the pettiness and trivial things a lot less. I think that trickled down to the messages and sassiness that are on this record. Art is a reflection of your life, so this record is happy and empowering, and I love that." - Bangshowbiz

