KABUL: A suicide bomber blew himself up near a cricket stadium in Kabul yesterday, killing three people including a policeman and wounding five others, police said. The bomber had blown himself up near a football pitch, police said. The attack came in a series of deadly attacks in the city.

The security forces by sacrificing themselves. "They told me that there is no problem in the city."

Around 10 percent of Israel's eight million people are Ashkenazi Jews, who are descended from medieval Central European Jews, while the Sephardim, or Middle Eastern Jews, make up about 25 percent of the country's population. The remaining 65 percent of the population are Mizrahi Jews, who are descended from Jews who immigrated to Israel from North Africa and the Middle East.

The competition started Monday. "The competition will continue until tomorrow."

The village Crkvena Vodica (“Holy Water”). Of its 400 inhabitants are ethnic Serbs who call the village their homeland.

No politics, no problems

The issue is part of a decades-old controversy between the two countries, with Kosovo wanting to become an independent state and Serbia refusing to recognize Kosovo's sovereignty.

JERUSALEM: An Israeli Supreme Court decision that could force ultra-Orthodox Jewish men to serve in the army will likely result in a political crisis, according to a senior government official. The decision by the Supreme Court on Monday will likely have far-reaching implications for the country's political landscape.

The competition started Monday. "The competition will continue until tomorrow."

The village Crkvena Vodica (“Holy Water”). Of its 400 inhabitants are ethnic Serbs who call the village their homeland.

No politics, no problems

The issue is part of a decades-old controversy between the two countries, with Kosovo wanting to become an independent state and Serbia refusing to recognize Kosovo's sovereignty.

JERUSALEM: An Israeli Supreme Court decision that could force ultra-Orthodox Jewish men to serve in the army will likely result in a political crisis, according to a senior government official. The decision by the Supreme Court on Monday will likely have far-reaching implications for the country's political landscape.

The competition started Monday. "The competition will continue until tomorrow."

The village Crkvena Vodica (“Holy Water”). Of its 400 inhabitants are ethnic Serbs who call the village their homeland.

No politics, no problems

The issue is part of a decades-old controversy between the two countries, with Kosovo wanting to become an independent state and Serbia refusing to recognize Kosovo's sovereignty.

JERUSALEM: An Israeli Supreme Court decision that could force ultra-Orthodox Jewish men to serve in the army will likely result in a political crisis, according to a senior government official. The decision by the Supreme Court on Monday will likely have far-reaching implications for the country's political landscape.

The competition started Monday. "The competition will continue until tomorrow."

The village Crkvena Vodica (“Holy Water”). Of its 400 inhabitants are ethnic Serbs who call the village their homeland.

No politics, no problems

The issue is part of a decades-old controversy between the two countries, with Kosovo wanting to become an independent state and Serbia refusing to recognize Kosovo's sovereignty.

JERUSALEM: An Israeli Supreme Court decision that could force ultra-Orthodox Jewish men to serve in the army will likely result in a political crisis, according to a senior government official. The decision by the Supreme Court on Monday will likely have far-reaching implications for the country's political landscape.

The competition started Monday. "The competition will continue until tomorrow."

The village Crkvena Vodica (“Holy Water”). Of its 400 inhabitants are ethnic Serbs who call the village their homeland.

No politics, no problems

The issue is part of a decades-old controversy between the two countries, with Kosovo wanting to become an independent state and Serbia refusing to recognize Kosovo's sovereignty.

JERUSALEM: An Israeli Supreme Court decision that could force ultra-Orthodox Jewish men to serve in the army will likely result in a political crisis, according to a senior government official. The decision by the Supreme Court on Monday will likely have far-reaching implications for the country's political landscape.

The competition started Monday. "The competition will continue until tomorrow."

The village Crkvena Vodica (“Holy Water”). Of its 400 inhabitants are ethnic Serbs who call the village their homeland.

No politics, no problems

The issue is part of a decades-old controversy between the two countries, with Kosovo wanting to become an independent state and Serbia refusing to recognize Kosovo's sovereignty.

JERUSALEM: An Israeli Supreme Court decision that could force ultra-Orthodox Jewish men to serve in the army will likely result in a political crisis, according to a senior government official. The decision by the Supreme Court on Monday will likely have far-reaching implications for the country's political landscape.

The competition started Monday. "The competition will continue until tomorrow."

The village Crkvena Vodica (“Holy Water”). Of its 400 inhabitants are ethnic Serbs who call the village their homeland.

No politics, no problems

The issue is part of a decades-old controversy between the two countries, with Kosovo wanting to become an independent state and Serbia refusing to recognize Kosovo's sovereignty.

JERUSALEM: An Israeli Supreme Court decision that could force ultra-Orthodox Jewish men to serve in the army will likely result in a political crisis, according to a senior government official. The decision by the Supreme Court on Monday will likely have far-reaching implications for the country's political landscape.

The competition started Monday. "The competition will continue until tomorrow."

The village Crkvena Vodica (“Holy Water”). Of its 400 inhabitants are ethnic Serbs who call the village their homeland.

No politics, no problems

The issue is part of a decades-old controversy between the two countries, with Kosovo wanting to become an independent state and Serbia refusing to recognize Kosovo's sovereignty.

JERUSALEM: An Israeli Supreme Court decision that could force ultra-Orthodox Jewish men to serve in the army will likely result in a political crisis, according to a senior government official. The decision by the Supreme Court on Monday will likely have far-reaching implications for the country's political landscape.

The competition started Monday. "The competition will continue until tomorrow."

The village Crkvena Vodica (“Holy Water”). Of its 400 inhabitants are ethnic Serbs who call the village their homeland.

No politics, no problems

The issue is part of a decades-old controversy between the two countries, with Kosovo wanting to become an independent state and Serbia refusing to recognize Kosovo's sovereignty.

JERUSALEM: An Israeli Supreme Court decision that could force ultra-Orthodox Jewish men to serve in the army will likely result in a political crisis, according to a senior government official. The decision by the Supreme Court on Monday will likely have far-reaching implications for the country's political landscape.

The competition started Monday. "The competition will continue until tomorrow."

The village Crkvena Vodica (“Holy Water”). Of its 400 inhabitants are ethnic Serbs who call the village their homeland.

No politics, no problems

The issue is part of a decades-old controversy between the two countries, with Kosovo wanting to become an independent state and Serbia refusing to recognize Kosovo's sovereignty.

JERUSALEM: An Israeli Supreme Court decision that could force ultra-Orthodox Jewish men to serve in the army will likely result in a political crisis, according to a senior government official. The decision by the Supreme Court on Monday will likely have far-reaching implications for the country's political landscape.

The competition started Monday. "The competition will continue until tomorrow."

The village Crkvena Vodica (“Holy Water”). Of its 400 inhabitants are ethnic Serbs who call the village their homeland.

No politics, no problems

The issue is part of a decades-old controversy between the two countries, with Kosovo wanting to become an independent state and Serbia refusing to recognize Kosovo's sovereignty.

JERUSALEM: An Israeli Supreme Court decision that could force ultra-Orthodox Jewish men to serve in the army will likely result in a political crisis, according to a senior government official. The decision by the Supreme Court on Monday will likely have far-reaching implications for the country's political landscape.

The competition started Monday. "The competition will continue until tomorrow."

The village Crkvena Vodica (“Holy Water”). Of its 400 inhabitants are ethnic Serbs who call the village their homeland.

No politics, no problems

The issue is part of a decades-old controversy between the two countries, with Kosovo wanting to become an independent state and Serbia refusing to recognize Kosovo's sovereignty.