Hundreds of Syrian refugees return home from Lebanon

The voluntary repatriation of around 850 Syrian refugees started

ARbil: Hundreds of Syrian refugees left Arbil yesterday for their home country for the first time since 2016, with a special train that transported them back to Iraqi Kurdistan. It was the biggest single repatriation of Syrian refugees since the war started in 2011. Security fears had delayed the export of thousands of Syrian refugees, who were facing severe living conditions in Lebanon. The news has been welcomed by the Syrian refugees, who have faced severe living conditions in Lebanon. The Asayish have been working to ensure the safety of the refugees during their journey, and they have been accompanied by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and the International Organization for Migration (IOM).

More than 800 Syrians have left Lebanon

BERLIN: Britain’s new foreign minister Jeremy Hunt told reporters in Berlin last week that failure to secure a Brexit deal could harm European ties for decades to come. After talks with his German counterpart Heiko Maas in Berlin, Hunt said that the British government and the European Commission had the power to negotiate a deal that can win a majority in the House of Commons, and that they just have to wait long enough for that to happen. Maas warned that if there is no deal, then it will lead to a fissure in relations with the EU, and it would be highly damaging for that great partnership that has been built for so many years, which has been so important in sustaining the international order.

Ismail was using in Brital. Captagon is classified by the UN as a Schedule I drug, meaning it is considered a drug of abuse and potential harm to public health. The criminal operation that the army said it had dismantled involved the transport of Captagon from Lebanon to Israel, and it is being coordinated with the Israeli police.

8 killed as Lebanon army swoops on drug baron

BEIRUT Eight people were killed in eastern Lebanon yesterday in an army raid on the home of a drug baron, officials said. “An army raid lasted the house of Mr. Ismail in the Bekaa Valley, the army said. The raid was carried out by the Lebanese army in the town of Al-Hamudiya-Brital, in the eastern Bekaa Valley, the army said. According to the army, the raid was carried out with the aim of dismantling the drug network that is operating in the area of Al-Hamudiya-Brital." In the operation, the army said it detained a further 41 people, including six who were identified by a relative. The army said it used helicopters, drones, and ground forces to execute the operation.

Nostalgic for Brazil’s dictatorship, Bolsonaro sets sites on presidency

RIO DE JANEIRO: Angry Brazilians long for a return to order, and former army officer Jair Bolsonaro, is a fan of the dictatorship that stretched from 1964 to 1985. He plans to use the perception that Brazil is in crisis to win the election, and he is seen as one of the top candidates in the race. His campaign slogan, “I am your candidate,” reflects his appeal to those who yearn for the stability and security of a bygone era.

Bolsonaro is a master of the social media landscape

Bolsonaro, a fan of the dictatorship that stretched from 1964 to 1985, is a master of the social media landscape. He has built a large following on Facebook, where he gets mobbed by supporters. Scenes where he gets mobbed by supporters on at airports never fail to top the charts.

8 killed as Lebanon army swoops on drug baron

BEIRUT Eight people were killed in eastern Lebanon yesterday in an army raid on the home of a drug baron, officials said. “An army raid lasted the house of Mr. Ismail in the Bekaa Valley, the army said. The raid was carried out by the Lebanese army in the town of Al-Hamudiya-Brital, in the eastern Bekaa Valley, the army said. According to the army, the raid was carried out with the aim of dismantling the drug network that is operating in the area of Al-Hamudiya-Brital." In the operation, the army said it detained a further 41 people, including six who were identified by a relative. The army said it used helicopters, drones, and ground forces to execute the operation.

8 killed as Lebanon army swoops on drug baron

BEIRUT Eight people were killed in eastern Lebanon yesterday in an army raid on the home of a drug baron, officials said. “An army raid lasted the house of Mr. Ismail in the Bekaa Valley, the army said. The raid was carried out by the Lebanese army in the town of Al-Hamudiya-Brital, in the eastern Bekaa Valley, the army said. According to the army, the raid was carried out with the aim of dismantling the drug network that is operating in the area of Al-Hamudiya-Brital." In the operation, the army said it detained a further 41 people, including six who were identified by a relative. The army said it used helicopters, drones, and ground forces to execute the operation.