Prime Minister praises distinguished relations with European Union

KUWAIT: His Highness the Amir Sheikh Sabah Al-Ahmad Al-Jaber Al-Sabah received yesterday at Bayan Palace Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Sheikh Sabah Al-Khaled Al-Hamad Al-Sabah, and the visiting European Union (EU) High Representative for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy and Vice-President Federica Mogherini. The meeting was attended by Deputy Minister of Amiri Diwan Affairs Sheikh Mohammad Abdullah Al-Mubarak Al-Sabah.

His Highness the Prime Minister Sheikh Jaber Al-Mubarak Al-Hamad Al-Sabah later received Mogherini and her accompanying delegation at Bayan Palace. During the meeting, His Highness the Prime Minister praised the distinguished relations between the State of Kuwait and the European Union, pointing out mutual interests on permanent coordination in various situations and issues that enhance security and peace in the world. He said that the opening of the headquarters of the EU mission in Kuwait confirms the interests of both sides to consolidate and maintain its historical relationship in areas that serve the interests of people.

The meeting was attended by the Assistant Foreign Minister for Europe Affairs Ambassador Walid Al-Khubaizi, Ambassador of Kuwait to Belgium and head of its missions to the European Union and NATO Jassem Al-Bedawi, and Undersecretary for Petitions in the Office of the Prime Minister Sheikh Nasser Ahmad Al-Salem Al-Sabah.

Deep-rooted ties

Kuwaiti Foreign Minister Sheikh Sabah Al-Khaled Al-Hamad Al-Sabah congratulated the European Union on the official opening of its new mission in Kuwait. This came as the minister Sheikh Sabah Al-Khaled Al-Hamad Al-Sabah received Mogherini on Saturday in Kuwait ahead of her attendance at the mission’s official launch, which took place yesterday. He praised the long-standing and deep-rooted ties between his country and the regional bloc, noting that the landmark is an “invaluable result of the ongoing development of positive and fruitful cooperation between the two sides.” Kuwait’s deputy prime minister and foreign minister also commended the EU’s “prominent role and its crucial and irreplaceable contributions” in ensuring regional and global security and stability.

Meanwhile, the senior EU official said she was proud of the joint efforts linking both sides, describing the mission as a clear sign of their extremely close proximity and a reflection of the EU’s firmness towards boosting its relationship with Kuwait. She also recalled Kuwait’s endeavors to support regional and international efforts for peace, security and conflict resolution amid the difficult situation the region is experiencing. Both senior officials proceeded to attend a dinner banquet, held in honor of the visiting EU official and her delegation. Speaking in Brussels ahead of her visit, Mogherini had lauded Kuwait as a “voice of wisdom and a force for peace in these difficult times for our region,” saying the Gulf country and the EU were “natural partners.” —KUNA

KUWAIT: The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees in Kuwait will start a new fund-raising campaign for refugees and displaced children between July 20 and August 20. The initiative, entitled ‘Joy of Eid,’ includes clothes, health care, food and shelter. Saqar, Chief of the UNHCR office in Kuwait for UNHCR, during a press conference held to launch the campaign. He added that the aid supported by the UNHCR will enable the children to stay alive referring to the pioneering Kuwaiti role in the humanitarian field that helped millions of refugees and displaced people to gain access to a decent life. He mentioned that Kuwait is one of the top five donor countries for the UNHCR on the international scale. He also stressed that the upcoming ‘Joy of Eid’ campaign will be the second of its type coming after the first campaign held in July 2018. He explained that the campaign targets 6000 children and 6000 women. He added that the campaign will be held on Monday, July 15, 2019. — KUNA

PARIS: President Emmanuel Macron yesterday sought to showcase European military cooperation in France’s annual Bastille Day parade, at a time of growing tensions between Europe and the United States. Key EU leaders, including German Chancellor Angela Merkel and British Prime Minister Mark Rutte, joined Macron in Paris to watch the parade from the Elysee Palace that commemorates the July 14, 1789, storming of the Bastille fortress in Paris during the French Revolution.

Some 4,300 members of the armed forces, including regiments from other European armies, marched down the avenue’s famed cobblestones in a tradition that dates back to the aftermath of World War I. Army dogs tracked the avenue’s famed cobblestones in a tradition that dates back to the aftermath of World War I. The parade is a “great gesture for a European defense policy,” Macron told reporters yesterday, as he attended the Bastille Day military parade down the Champs Elysees and the assembled leaders.

The army is transforming it is modernising for our soldiers, our sovereignty, and our independence,” Macron told France 2 television in brief remarks. Staging in an open-top command car alongside France’s chief of staff General François Lecointre, Macron was met with some cheers and jeers from supporters of the “yellow vest” movement who have staged worldwide protests against the government since last fall. Two prominent members of the movement, Jerome Rodrigues and Maxime Nicole, were both detained by the police, sources told AFP.

“We can’t let our country’s sovereignies be under attack by others,” he said.

Armed man dead after attacking US immigration jail

LOUIS ANGELES: An armed man who attacked a US immigration detention facility with "incendiary devices" has been shot dead after a confrontation with police in the northwest of the city of Los Angeles.

The shooting happened near the Green River Station, which is home to a large immigration detention center near the city's main airport.

Los Angeles police said the man approached officers with an object resembling a flame thrower and a lighter, and then "loomed" at the officers with a lighter.

Officers then shot the man, who has not been identified, and he later died at a hospital.

The shooting comes amid a national debate over immigration policy, with many people calling for more restrictions on the entry of undocumented immigrants into the United States.

A court yesterday ordered a prominent Johannesburg-based lawyer to pay damages to a former employee of his who alleged he had been dismissed without any reason.

The law firm of Huljic and Partners, which employs the lawyer, had argued that the employee had been terminated due to "injustifiable causes.

The employee, who was working as a paralegal, had alleged that he had been fired without any notice and that his dismissal was unfair.

The lawyer had countered that the employee had been fired for "conduct unbecoming a lawyer.

The court ruled in favor of the employee and ordered the law firm to pay him damages.

Tax-weary Greek traders welcome change of govt

ATHEA: "One or two taxes are paid at the end of the day. When 20 or 25 euros left in my pocket," lamented Greek hairdresser Vasilis Maselos, president of the Greek ready-to-wear association (SEPEE), said he was confident that a new government will show "understanding" to entrepreneurs.

"There are many opportunities in Greece," particularly in tourism, he said.

Slow recovery in incomes

Petros Bitkis, professor of finance at the University of Athens, calculated Greece will not return to pre-crisis prosperity levels by 2023. "Greeks have been living in a world without a country," he said. "People only buy what is essential." While cutting taxes, he also needs to make Greece a "more competitive" destination.

Ooredoo Team hosts in 88.8 and 90.4 with Ali Najmi and Khalid Al Ansari

Event discusses ANA, Ooredoo passport and other offers during summer

Kuwait: Ooredoo Kuwait has joined Minaa FM and Kuwait Pulse radio stations to talk about ANA, the first of its kind digital package in Kuwait, as well as the Ooredoo Passport Roaming Packages and Ooredoo’s latest achievements with the 5G network. Where his speech is from the Marketing Department and Abdali Fath Al-Qahtani from the Corporate Communications Department, joined Najm from Minaa FM and Al Ansari from Kuwait Pulse Radio. He said that Ooredoo is the first telecom company in the Kuwaiti market to launch a digital service such as ANA, which is an All-in-one package, individually customised mobile package that provides customers with exclusive content, features, control of their mobile plans and digital payment services. Najm also paid tribute to Ooredoo services directly from their mobile phones and their efforts to develop great content for their customers.

In which the launch of ANA, Ooredoo’s major initiative in digital transformation has sparked in many pivotal initiatives, such as the introduction of the JetFX SIM in Kuwait, the first 5G international call in the region between Ooredoo Kuwait and Ooredoo Qatar, and the launch of the new 5G hub in Jeddah, to name just a few. Although the live reflections on Ooredoo’s role as a major provider in the mid-2050s, where it is willing to do whatever it sees fit for the US economy. Powell also dismissed the importance of a strong US labor market reading in line that caused economies to double the beginning of the month at the job holes due to their low inflation and economic data has been generally disappointing. The Fed stance toward a rate cut at a time where the US has consistently low employment is being described as more economic as an “insurance” policy against downturn, rather than a recessionary downturn, given the current data.

In response to the testimony, NATO’s 29 heads of state and government have agreed to raise military spending to 2% of GDP by 2024. This is an increase from the current 1.5% of GDP, which is more than 10 times below the target of 2% of GDP. The increase in military spending is intended to strengthen NATO’s ability to defend against future threats, including Russia, and to maintain a credible deterrent against potential aggression.

During his testimony before the joint committee on the state of the economy, Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell stated that the US economy is in a strong position and that the Fed is prepared to take action if necessary to support economic growth. However, he also noted that the Fed is watching closely the developments in the global economy and is prepared to adjust its policy as needed.

How to talk so the board will listen

As technology moves to the center of most organizations’ processes across the GEs, especially in a world where digital transformation is the norm, understanding the infrastructure conflicts, business continuity, and the need for constant staff and equipment updates becomes a common concern. Business continuity also receives a lot of attention considering the ever-evolving threats faced by organizations. Enterprises are increasingly looking for ways to ensure that their systems and processes remain operational during unexpected events. This makes it crucial to understand how to effectively communicate with the board and senior management about these issues.

The board’s role

In general, the board serves four purposes: to set context in matrix, to challenge the status quo, to manage the organization’s culture, and to manage risk. The board’s primary responsibility is to ensure that the organization is making the right decisions and that the executive team is executing those decisions effectively. The board also has a role in providing strategic direction and oversight of the company’s performance.

Communication challenges

Quarterly earnings reports, regulatory filings, and other public announcements are important topics that need to be communicated to the board. However, the board’s role is not limited to receiving these reports. The board also needs to be involved in decision-making processes and provide guidance on strategic matters.

How to communicate

1. Use clear and concise language: Avoid jargon and technical terms that the board may not understand. Use simple, straightforward language to convey your message.
2. Be prepared: Research the topic thoroughly before the meeting. This will help you stay on track and avoid the risk of being sidetracked by less important matters.
3. Use visual aids: Charts, graphs, and other visual aids can help illustrate your points and make your presentation more engaging.
4. Be open to feedback: The board may have questions or concerns. Be willing to listen and address their concerns.

In conclusion, effective communication with the board is crucial for the success of any organization. By understanding the board’s role and using effective communication strategies, you can ensure that your message is heard and understood.
Director and board member of the Aqua Park City, Mohammed Abdul Redha Khorsheed stressed that this summer season would be a lot different at the Aqua Park. Khorsheed explained that the entire park had been repaired and maintained to ensure cleanliness and safety for all visitors. Khorsheed added that special trainers and lifeguards would be available throughout the park’s working hours.

“We have arranged for various recreational programs and surprises on daily bases to bring joy to everyone during the hot summer,” Khorsheed added noting that favorite cartoon figures would be available in addition to endless educational and recreational activities for the children, a number of musical bands, famous presenters, valuable prizes and free tickets for the winner.

As ransomware rages, debate heats up on response

WASHINGTON: City services in Baltimore, Maryland, were paralyzed under the weight of a ransomware attack that locked up computer networks and made it impossible for residents to make property transactions or pay their municipal utility bills. Authorities refused to meet hackers’ demands for a ransom of $76,000 to unlock the systems, but have been saddled with an estimate of $18 million in costs of restoring and rebuilding the city’s computer networks.

During a similar case in Atlanta a year earlier, hacking the city’s computer networks led to a municipal network security shutdown, with officials saying it cost $17 million to respond to some 560 ransomware incidents in 2018 but also noted that most victims are unreported.

The same ministry report said hackers had shifted their strategy from attacking many systems with demands for small ransoms to more targeted attacks with higher potential payout.

Pay or resist?

While the FBI and others warn against paying ransoms, some analysts say there is no clear best answer is to take a hardline “don’t pay” attitude. “I don’t agree with any organization or government that under any circumstance pays these ransoms,” said Randy Marchany, chief information security officer for Virginia Tech University, said the best answer is to take a hardline “don’t pay” attitude. “I don’t agree with any organization or government that under any circumstance pays these ransoms,” said Randy Marchany, chief information security officer for Virginia Tech University, said the best answer is to take a hardline “don’t pay” attitude. “I don’t agree with any organization or government that under any circumstance pays these ransoms,” said Randy Marchany, chief information security officer for Virginia Tech University, said the best answer is to take a hardline “don’t pay” attitude. “I don’t agree with any organization or government that under any circumstance pays these ransoms,” said Randy Marchany, chief information security officer for Virginia Tech University, said the best answer is to take a hardline “don’t pay” attitude. “I don’t agree with any organization or government that under any circumstance pays these ransoms,” said Randy Marchany, chief information security officer for Virginia Tech University, said the best answer is to take a hardline “don’t pay” attitude. “I don’t agree with any organization or government that under any circumstance pays these ransoms,” said Randy Marchany, chief information security officer for Virginia Tech University, said the best answer is to take a hardline “don’t pay” attitude. “I don’t agree with any organization or government that under any circumstance pays these ransoms,” said Randy Marchany, chief information security officer for Virginia Tech University, said the best answer is to take a hardline “don’t pay” attitude. “I don’t agree with any organization or government that under any circumstance pays these ransoms,” said Randy Marchany, chief information security officer for Virginia Tech University, said the best answer is to take a hardline “don’t pay” attitude. “I don’t agree with any organization or government that under any circumstance pays these ransoms,” said Randy Marchany, chief information security office
People close to you might be a bit worried about you, Cancer. Too much work and socializing might be taking you away from the things that you enjoy. You may want to consider taking a break and doing something for yourself. Take a moment to remind your cheerleader to accomplish the most in the least amount of time. You can do it.

Confirmation of professional success could come your way, Aries, and you probably feel satisfied and ready to take your business to the next level. But you may find that increased responsibilities will make you feel better if you squeeze in a few hours for your friends each week. You could get stressed to the point of taxing your strength too much, and that won't be good for your health. Make sure you take time for yourself.

Success on all levels is filling your life and making you feel absolutely wonderful, Taurus. This success, however, may be the result of your hard work and dedication. But you may find that increased responsibilities will make you feel better if you squeeze in a few hours for your friends each week. You could get stressed to the point of taxing your strength too much, and that won't be good for your health. Make sure you take time for yourself.

Mentally, however, you might be a bit vague. You may be easily distracted and not as alert as usual. You need to take care of your mental health and try to stay focused. You should let yourself enjoy your success while still using common sense.

All continues to go well professionally, Leo. You're feeling physically strong and vigorous. Your hard work, enthusiasm, and dedication are now paying off financially. New opportunities are coming your way, and you're probably feeling excited and motivated to keep pushing. But you may find that increased responsibilities will make you feel better if you squeeze in a few hours for your friends each week. You could get stressed to the point of taxing your strength too much, and that won't be good for your health. Make sure you take time for yourself.

Many of your personal goals have either been met or are in progress, Pisces. You're feeling healthy, balanced, and good from the inside out. You may want to consider taking a break and doing something for yourself. You should let yourself enjoy your success while still using common sense.

As the month begins, it's important to remember that people who aren't particularly trustworthy might decide to latch onto your coattails for their own purposes. This is fine as long as you're discriminating and not allowing them to take advantage of you. You need to be aware of the potential for manipulation and not fall for any sob stories.

People are in the mood for change, Taurus. You're feeling fresh and ready to try something new. You need to be aware of the potential for manipulation and not fall for any sob stories.

Lay low today, Pisces. Don't try to force any answers from people. Eat a healthy breakfast and stay away from caffeine. Relate to people on an intellectual or philosophical level and avoid getting into arguments or heated discussions.

In your personal life, you might be a bit worried about the things that you enjoy. You may want to consider taking a break and doing something for yourself. You should let yourself enjoy your success while still using common sense.
Guardian angels hit Montreal’s clubs to tackle harassment

O n a frigid night, amid the flashing lights and heavy beat of Montreal’s Datcha nightclub, a diminutive young man emerges from the dark, clad in a black T-shirt and shorts, with a small microphone in his hand and a large phalanx of boozed-up partygoers tailing him in a swarm. He is Eliane Thivierge, a 24-year-old student at McGill University who, in her spare time, goes around to nightclubs, including Datcha, and confronts men who are acting inappropriately, particularly those who are touching women.

Thivierge, who recounts the story to AFP in one of the co-founders of PLURI, a Montreal group formed two years ago with the goal of reshaping the culture of the city’s nightlife, where harassment of all kinds is rife. Night clubs and bars have become places where men can rub themselves up against women on the dance floor, the use of date-rape drugs, and other problems. Similar schemes have emerged at the same time in other Canadian cities such as Vancouver and Toronto, as well as in Europe, including in Britain, France and Belgium. The combination of night-time crowds, low lighting and alcohol can lead to undesirable behavior in environments that are not conducive to confrontation. “In a party atmosphere, if someone fixes on you and is following you, it’s rare you’ll say anything to them,” Thivierge said.

Thivierge’s group, she contends, has been successful in changing attitudes. “Sometimes it is enough for Martin to invite a woman to come with him and stand next to her, to explain to the person that she is uncomfortable about what is happening. Sometimes it is enough for me to say that people should not be following other people around, that they are university students and not to worry about it,” Thivierge said.

Stay with friends

Eliane Thivierge, an 18-year-old student taking a break in front of Datcha, says she gets harassed all the time. “Every time I go out, there are guys who come up to me and grab my hips,” she said. Even though she feels that men have been hassling her, she considers herself lucky: she recently had to call an ambulance for a man who had been shown a drugs.

According to a recent survey by the Conseil des Montrealaises, a women’s group, 40% of partygoers got fresh air outside the Datcha nightclub in Montreal’s Mile-End neighborhood. — AFP

Parties are a safe haven for violence

For the members of PLURI trying to ward off these problems, there are no questions of them playing the police officer. “We don’t want to shame anybody we want to have a conversation. We want there to be education happening,” said Thivierge. “It’s the same time, we are trying to shift behavior so that people feel safe in spaces.” The basis of the group’s work is “bystander intervention,” which means a third party getting involved when they witness harassment. Sometimes it is enough for Martin to simply get some distance between the victim and the person who is putting them in an uncomfortable position, merely by moving them outside for a minute.

Often, the people that the activists approach understand the problem and change their behavior. “We almost end up giving lessons on how to pick someone up. If we are talking, we are explaining the concept of consent and respecting other people’s personal space. The task can be complicated when the person are trying to reason with a very drunk, and some are quick to call the activist’s approach of offering explanations. “That’s a teaching experience I don’t want to take on,” said Thivierge.

Changing awareness

If talking does not work, and someone gets upset, we have traditional bystanders for that,” said Adam Wilcox, a longtime DJ and co-owner of Datcha, “We have seen people get upset and yelling and things get a bit out of control.” Thivierge, who has noted a change in attitude in recent years, has been working with boozed-up partygoers for that, and some are quick to offer their assistance.

Education is what gives it a bad name,” he added. By paying for PLURI’s services, he hopes to change that dynamic. More and more people are turning to PLURI, whether for their members to attend events or for training, said Thivierge, who has changed a change in attitude in recent years, and what people come to expect from nightlife and its culture and it’s what gives to a bad name.”

The Prussian royals were initially stripped of their properties without compensation after the monarchy was overthrown, but a deal on the monarchy’s assets was later worked out between the state and the Hohenzollern under a October 29, 1926 law. Negotiations have been going on “for several years” between the German state, the culture ministry said Friday, confirming a report in Der Spiegel magazine. Negotiations were being spearheaded by Georg Friedrich Ferdinand, the Hohenzollern House on the other hand,” said the culture ministry in a statement. According to Ber Spiegel, the Hohenzollerns are seeking the return of tens of thousands of paintings, sculptures, coins, books and furniture. Furthermore, they want a right to reside at one of several properties, including Cecilienhof Palace, where allied powers met after World War II to dictate on Germany’s future. The restitution negotiations were being spearheaded by Hochgeordneten, which were deposited and went into exile after Germany’s defeat in World War I. Brazilian director of refugee odyssey laments far-right attack on artists

The reality of her homeland lends to the far-right political landscape of Brazil, where former president Jair Bolsonaro has branded the arts as a “cultural Marxism.”

Bolsonaro’s arrival in power has dealt the equivalent of an electric shock to the Brazilian cultural scene. A politician who has spoken with nostalgia of the 1964-65 military dictatorship, he has hardly presented the seat of office to a man who wished to rid the country of “cultural marxism.” He also reduced the status of the culture ministry to a mere section of a newly-created ministry of citizenship. For Jatahy, the world of theatre has oscillated between the production of numerous plays which do talk about the situation. “There is a campaign of criminalization of artists in her own country, since the arrival in Brazil’s presidential palace in January of former army captain Jair Bolsonaro. “It’s a very difficult time to do theatre and cinema,” explains Jatahy. “They have cut subsidies, it’s a means of gagging us,” she tells AFP, having at times received the seals of office when he vowed to rid the scene of artists, labeling them as being leftist. It’s such an old trope,” she adds.

How Attenborough nature docs inspired new ‘Lion King’

Directors of the new ‘Lion King’ were inspired by the majestic scope of David Attenborough’s natural world documentaries although the talking animals did cause some problem, its creators have revealed. The film tells the classic tale of young lion Simba’s odyssey to amounts the throne, which ultimately fulfills the 1994 original’s ‘Circle of Life’ theme-treats viewers to breathtaking ‘shots’ of antelopes, zebras and wildebeest galloping across the African savannah.

The movie also featured the musical talents of celebrated German composer Hans Zimmer, who provided the soundtracks for the Attenborough series ‘Planet Earth II’ produced by the BBC. Attenborough, a veteran British environmentalist, has narrated dozens of wildlife documentaries over a few decades, opening the eyes of millions of television viewers around the globe to the wonders of the natural world.

It was important that the film be a ‘cinematic document’, stressed Favreau before Tuesday’s premiere that ‘you have to have the animators, or the special effects people, or the costume people…artists that make sure that it looks like a real thing’. The animators had to rely on real facial expressions for inspiration, before artists and technicians would give that to the animators,” explained Favreau. Unlike the original cartoon version, the animatic scenes in the new ‘Lion King’ are largely realistic and not human-looking. This meant the animators had to rely on actors for inspiration, but Favreau told AFP before the premiere that ‘they’ve brought it to a whole another level: the voice actors are talking about this being the closest relationship between the voice actor and the animated character they’re doing’.

The voice actors are also helped by the presence of text on the screen, allowing them to shape their performance. ‘It’s different from a stage performance, because in a stage performance there’s a relationship between the audience and the voice actor, which is not there in this film,’ said Pavlacka. ‘I think we have a very specific audience for this, people who grew up with the original movie and have a feel for the characters. We’re trying to keep that relationship alive. We want to present the new movie as a continuation of the original story.’

Egypt opens two ancient pyramids, unveils new finds

Egypt on Saturday opened two ancient pyramids south of the capital Cairo and unveiled a collection of newly found sarcophagi, some containing well-preserved mummies, antiquities minister Khaled Al-Anani said.

Al-Anani told reporters the Bent Pyramid of King Sneferu, the first pharaoh of Egypt’s 4th dynasty, and a nearby pyramid would be reopened to visitors for the first time since 1965. He also said a team of archaeologists had uncovered sarcophagi and the remains of an ancient wall dating back to the Middle Kingdom some 4,000 years ago. The finds were made during excavation work in the royal necropolis of Dahshur on the west bank of the Nile River, an area home to some of Egypt’s oldest pyramids.

“Several stone, clay and wooden sarcophagi were found and some contain mummies in good condition,” the antiquities ministry said in a statement. The ancient wall stretches some 60 meters and is situated south of the pyramid of 12th dynasty pharaoh King Amenemhat II, also in the Dahshur necropolis. The finds also included funerary masks as well as tools dating back to the Late Period—which spanned almost 300 years up to Alexander the Great’s conquest of Egypt in 332 BC—used for cutting stones, the ministry said.

Egypt has in recent years sought to promote archaeological discoveries across the country in a bid to revive tourism, which took a hit from the turmoil that followed its 2011 uprising. — AFP

Congresswomen told by Trump to 'go back' where they're from

WASHINGTON, US President Donald Trump yesterday told unnamed Democratic congresswomen to ‘go back’ where they’re from in a tweet that quickly became the latest controversy to engulf the administration.

Trump retweeted a post by a supporter in which he praised the president, saying: “They all leave the US and come back complaining about how bad it is here. They all should be given a one way ticket to their country! They all owe a big debt to the US. If they want to visit, they should pay for their own trip. They should be asking to be, what members joke among themselves, ‘the ambassador to her or his country’.”

Trump’s comments came after members of Congress who are all of colour told Trump they were visiting a prison today, which he described as a “terrible thing to see,” adding: “This is what America is supposed to do!”

They were, Trump said, “the most representative people in this country.”

His comments come amid growing national discourse about immigration and the rejection of people who do not appear to be “white, normal and straight.”

“Of course I was shocked by his comments,” said Muslim-American congresswoman Ilhan Omar, who is of Somali descent and represents Minnesota’s 5th District. “I am someone who has lived in the US all my life, and I have never experienced the kind of hatred and racism that has come from the Trump administration. He has no idea what it’s like to be a Muslim in America.”

Republican leaders of Congress have condemned the tweets.

But Trump is likely to continue to make controversial comments in the weeks ahead, as he faces increasing challenges from the Democratic Party.

In a major move, the Indian government today decided to deport a large number of people who failed to make the cut in the 2019 NRC (National Register of Citizens) exercise. Those who failed to make the cut have to move to one of the detention camps in Assam.

The move is the first of its kind in the state and is a major setback for the government and its allies in Assam, which has been struggling to deal with the influx of illegal immigrants.

Assam has a history of hosting the largest number of refugees in India, with around 100 “Foreigners Tribunals” currently in place. These tribunals have been established to identify and deport illegal immigrants.

The move has been met with widespread criticism, with many people expressing concern about the future of the refugees.

“We are facing a lot of problems and difficulties,” said a refugee who asked not to be named. “The government has not been doing anything to help us and we are left to fend for ourselves.”

But others have expressed hope that the government’s decision will help them find a place to live.

“I am grateful to the government for deporting these people,” said another refugee. “I have been living in this camp for years and I am looking for a place to live.”
Tampa Bay starter Charlie Morton (11-2) gave up two runs earning a split of its doubleheader with a victory over Houston set the table to split the series with a victory in George Springer walk. Altuve (4-for-6, three runs) followed with a two-run single and pinch-hitter Jose Altuve capped his 30th career four-hit game with a two-run double off Jose LeBlanc (5-3) in the first inning, giving host Milwaukee a victory over San Diego.

Wade LeBlanc (5-3) was pummeled for six runs and 10 extra hits in four innings. Seattle left-hander Mike Leake (8-3) allowed one run and each exited with the score tied at 1-1. Neither starting pitcher allowed an earned run and each struck out seven batters. Keston Hiura, then serving up Gamel's 428 home run as St. Louis combined on a four-hitter to defeat New York. Tyler O'Neill drove in four runs with a double and a single in his first three at-bats, a two-run single and host Kansas City downed struggling Red Sox starter Chris Sale allowed five runs and Jake Odorizzi (11-4) tossed 5 1/3 strong innings for visiting Minnesota recorded a victory over Oakland.

Pinch hitter Ben Gamel one-hopped the right field fence in the bottom of ninth to earn the win. Luke Jackson gave up a two-run double to Christian Yelich after seeing it posted on Instagram. It was a disappointing loss for Kameda, who started uneventful through the first three innings. But Vargas, who had been deducted a point but regained his composure after opposition from sponsors Nike, who revealed he learned about his trade last month after seeing it posted on Instagram.

Davis was set to make his first start following a neck injury that forced him to miss nearly three weeks. But Vargas didn't let that affect him. He opened the fight with two straight knockdowns and combinations.

Vargas defeated Kameda to retain his WBC crown.

Icardi leaves training amid transfer rumors

INTER: Inter Milan striker Mauro Icardi has left the club’s training camp in Switzerland after being suspended for two days for a late arrival. The Argentine striker was suspended for two days and was in danger of being suspended for the next three matches. Icardi was the joint-top scorer in the 2017-18 Serie A season with 31 goals, but was later found guilty of a doping violation in the 2017-18 season. He had been suspended for two days and was in danger of being suspended for the next three matches.

The chances of him rejoining the Catalan giants are unknown, but if the chances are slim, the chances are that Icardi will stay with the club. A transfer for Icardi to Juventus is not impossible, but if the chances are slim, the chances are that Icardi will stay with the club.
England wins the Cricket World Cup

One of the greatest ODIs in cricket history

England (total 242-8 dec in 49.5 overs) beat New Zealand (227-8 in 50 overs) by 15 runs in a nail-biting Super Over to win the inaugural Cricket World Cup at Old Trafford on Sunday. England's Ben Stokes and Jos Buttler took 15 off Trent Boult's over to win, while New Zealand's Martin Guptill could only manage a single.

England's triumph was the culmination of a remarkable rise over the past two years, with the team's success in the World Cup completing a remarkable 12-month turnaround for coach Chris Silverwood's team. The semi-final win over New Zealand was the latest in a series of memorable performances by England, who have made a habit of coming from behind in recent years to seal major victories.

The match was a classic of the game, with both teams playing some of the best cricket of the tournament. England's batting line-up, led by the 84-run partnership between Joe Root and Jonny Bairstow, set up the winning Super Over. New Zealand's batting, led by Martin Guptill and Jimmy Neesham, scored a competitive 242 in their 49.5 overs, but were unable to bowl England out within the target of 243.

The Super Over was a thrilling contest, with New Zealand batting first and England batting second. Stokes and Buttler scored the winning runs off the last ball of the Super Over, with New Zealand failing to score four runs in their attempt to win the World Cup.

The victory was England's first major international trophy since winning the 2015 World Cup, and the win also marked the return of the legendary English all-rounder Ben Stokes to the international stage after a long injury lay-off.

England's triumph was a testament to the team's hard work and dedication over the past two years, and to the fans who have supported them through thick and thin. The win was a fitting conclusion to a superb tournament, with England emerging as the dominant force in international cricket.
