MP questions 110 over terror cell as suspects sent to Egypt

Govt praises ministry for busting Brotherhood-linked network

By B Izzak

KUWAIT: The government praised interior ministry personnel for apprehending the terrorism cell that was arrested by the Interior Ministry’s Counter-Terrorism Department and the Central Investigation Authority. The Cabinet decided that the contribution of the members in the cell contributed towards the discovery of the cell, and that the strict measures that were taken must be observed in future to safeguard the country. The cabinet praised the ministry’s personnel for their efforts in identifying the suspects and taking action in the case.

The government also noted that the ministry has taken measures to ensure that the suspects are kept in custody until the investigation is completed.

Housing loan for women linked

KUWAIT: The Cabinet has amended the conditions under which women can get housing loans, said minister responsible for housing, Dr Jenan Boushehri. The new loan scheme will be available to women for the first time, and will be linked to the rent they pay, which will be determined by a third party. The new scheme will be available to women who have been living in the country for at least five years, and who have a stable source of income.

Truck steps up attacks on congresswomen

WASHINGTON: US President Donald Trump spoke out against a congresswoman’s attack on him, saying that it was “unacceptable.” He went on to say that the congresswoman should “be ashamed of herself.” The congresswoman in question was Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez, who accused Trump of being a “rich, white man.”

Kuwait always tries to build unity in region: Mogherini

Mogherini, who also visited Iraq over the weekend, said, "I was Sunni in Kuwait. That is another country that has always expressed a very wise and rational position, always trying to build bridges and rebuild the unity in the region," added Mogherini.

Dr. Khalid Al-Jarallah, Kuwaiti Deputy Foreign Minister, had an official meeting with the Dominican Republic’s Foreign Minister Ambassador Rafael Alén, who is on a visit to the country.

Mr. Al-Jarallah exchange views on several issues of mutual interest. The meeting was attended by Mr. Mohammad Al-Mahmoud, Foreign Ministry Undersecretary; Mr. Ahmad Nasser Al-Mohammad, Assistant Foreign Minister; Mr. Khaled Al-Sabah, State Minister for Foreign Affairs; Mr. Mohammad Al-Turk, Assistant Foreign Minister; and Mr. Ali Al-Subhi, Assistant Foreign Minister.

The meeting was attended by Mr. Mohammad Al-Mahmoud, Foreign Ministry Undersecretary; Mr. Ahmad Nasser Al-Mohammad, Assistant Foreign Minister; Mr. Khaled Al-Sabah, State Minister for Foreign Affairs; Mr. Mohammad Al-Turk, Assistant Foreign Minister; and Mr. Ali Al-Subhi, Assistant Foreign Minister.

Mr. Al-Jarallah stressed that the region has long been a source of conflict and tension, and that the United States, the European Union, and other countries have been working to bring about peace and stability in the region.

"I believe that the regional conflicts are not due to the lack of will of the countries involved, but rather to the lack of vision and strategy," said Mr. Al-Jarallah.

"There is a need for a comprehensive solution that takes into account the interests of all parties involved," he added.

Mr. Al-Jarallah also emphasized the importance of multilateralism and international cooperation in addressing the challenges facing the region.

"We need to work together to find solutions that are sustainable and acceptable to all parties involved," he said.

"We must also work to build trust and confidence among the countries in the region," he added.
Industry awards reaffirm Ooredoo’s progress towards becoming a global digital enabler

Group honored with ‘Best Telco Digital Transformation Project’ award

Ooredoo’s Group transformation into a digital enabler across its global footprint was recently recognized at the ME Awards. Ooredoo Group was honored with the Best Telco Digital Transformation Project award at the 2019 edition of the awards in London which shines a light on innovation in the telco industry.

The pressure is on for telecommunications companies to deliver their operations and drive growth through new revenue streams. Understanding the digital ecosystem and the emerging trends within it has become critical for telecommunications companies looking to succeed and capture digital opportunity.

Across Ooredoo’s global footprint, digital transformation efforts are also reaping recognition. At Qatar, Ooredoo was awarded the Digital Transformation Award at the Arabian Digital Transformation Awards for its new revolutionary sports app, which transforms how fans engage with their favorite sports.

Indeed Ooredoo recently won a Gold Stevie® Award for its mobile wallet service, which has been leading the drive for innovation from within. With its focus on evolution to 5G, in order to enrich people’s digital lives, Ooredoo is making rapid strides to become a preferred digital partner.

Social responsibility continues to sit at the heart of Ooredoo’s digital transformation with Asiacell, Ooredoo’s operating company in Iraq recently recognized by the Ministry of Communications of Iraq and an Ooredoo Maldives smart city project recognized for its Innovation in Living, Learning, Working Environments.

Commenting on the win, Sheikha Noura bint Jaber Al Thani, Group CEO, Ooredoo, said: “We are honored to have been recognized once again for our continuous innovation and become a digital partner of choice.

Underpinning this transformation is a push to deliver a better experience for customers already enjoying the benefits of the digital world. Ooredoo’s efforts to digitize its operations and drive growth through new revenue streams is an ongoing process.

Goven pushes citizens’ employment in private sector as companies ‘reluctant’ to hire Kuwaitis

More efforts expected to examine expat laborers’ degrees

By Asil Al-Fintah and Mustafa Al-Breiki

KUWAIT: The government reviewed a report about citizen employment in the private sector and implementing the replacement policy in the government sector in its meeting held yesterday. Two officials informed sources said reports on employment obstacles were prepared to present the government as well as opportunities for Kuwaitis in the private sector. The officials added that domestic companies are still hesitant to hire Kuwaitis despite the increase in their employment compared to previous years.

In the meantime, the sources said the coming period is expected to see further procedures to verify the authenticity of expatriate degrees in cooperation with professional societies as well as the higher education ministry, adding that the examinations may reveal many forgeries committed by expatriates. The sources said a decision to increase percentages of Kuwaitis’ employment in the private sector may be issued before the end of the current fiscal year.

In another development, the government has allocated KD 5 million for the current fiscal year to be used as a compensation for the oil industry. The sources said the money is related to activities that enable better conditions for the workers. The sources said the ministry had some objections to the ministry’s plan to shift the focus from the oil industry to the private sector.

Fire breaks out at Kuwait University college building

KUWAIT: Firemen put out a blaze at a Kuwait University college building yesterday. The fire was caused by a short circuit. Authorities evacuated the building before the fire was con­trolled by KFSD and the university in cooperation with the Ministry of Interior, KU said in a statement. Efforts are under way to resume work in the affected areas of the college building.

KUWAIT: Head of Kuwait Fishermen’s Union Chairman Al-Swaimi said the ban period for them amid violations by some neighboring countries’ fishermen to fish zubaidi during the ban period. He demanded that the fishing ban in Kuwait be reviewed, pending the results of an ongoing meeting of authorities and decision makers to recon­sider the ban or banning imports from neighboring countries.

Zubaidi fishing season starts today

By Mustafa Al-Breiki

KUWAIT: Head of Kuwait Fishermen’s Union Chairman Al-Swaimi said the zubaidi (silver pomfret) fishing season will start today after a 60-day pause in Kuwaiti territorial waters. Swaimi wondered about the reason for the fishing ban in Kuwait as zubaidi is brought to Kuwait through out­ports and Kuwaiti citizens considered zubaidi the main source of their livelihood. Swaimi said the fishery authorities and the Ministry of Agriculture and Animal Resources must be provided with a unified con­tent to comply with the following: The supervisory authorities must be provided with a unified con­tact number, Names of companies and contact values, Should also be mentioned in the contract, Companies must be authorized to sign, and the authorization must be authenticated by the Kuwait Chamber of Commerce and Industry. All previous minutes of the permanent drugs committee should be submitted. Contracting procedures should not be delayed.

Defiant at inquiry, Zuma denies breaking law with Gupta family

S Africa’s ex-leader claims he’s a victim of conspiracy

JOHANNESBURG: Former South African President Jacob Zuma told a court yesterday that because he had plotted to bring him down, and had now won a case, the business family at the centre of an influence-peddling scandal was “killing him”. Citing a “false public outcry”, saying he was the victim of a “character assassination” by “criminals” who had tried to get rid of him for more than 20 years.

Zuma’s appearance in court, up to two allegations that Zuma allowed criminals to plunder state coffers and influence government appointments — marked a dramatic fall from grace for a politician who long dominated the country’s politics. Zuma, ousted by the governing African National Congress (ANC) in February 2018 and replaced by Cyril Ramaphosa, has consistently denied wrongdoing over his nine years in power.

Referring to the three Gupta business brothers, Zuma said: “I never did anything with them unlawfully; they were just innocent friends. Never, never did I discuss any matter which does not belong to them.” They were “businesspeople and successful businesspeople…Zuma continued.

“I am not a businessperson, I know nothing about business. I am a politician, I know something about politics.” Under pressure from trials in the ANC, Zuma set up the corruption inquiry he now sits before in his final weeks as president, as a number of apartheid-era figures, including Priscilla, feared scandals surrounding Zuma could intimidate them.

Zuma had avoided establishing the inquiry since 2016, partly because of lingering doubts that ministers and top bureaucrats had been able to influence ministerial appointments, and between the Vatican to question Francesca Chaouqui, a PR consultant who had worked in the tiny state and was deposed by Laura Sgro, who is the Orlandi’s family lawyer. Orlandi told the Italian group Mediaset that he had defended by Laura Sgro, who is the Orlandi’s family lawyer. Chaouqui called him the day before the tombs were opened to say they would be bare. “In an effort to dispel the doubts however, particularly after Orlandi’s brother Pietro, who has spent his adult life searching for his mother Nisrin, 34.

“I fear she’ll never be like other Yazidi children,” said her mother Nisrin, 34.

Tombs riddle could see Vatican’s efforts to find teen backfire

VATICAN CITY: The Vatican attempts to help the 1,500 Yazidi children who went missing 20 years ago have merely deplored the mystery surrounding the fate, and risk failing, analysis says. Emadina Orleans the daughter of a Vatican emigre who went missing a year ago, and theories have circulated for decades about who took her and where her body might lie. Two tombs at the Saint Peter’s Cemetery in the Vatican were opened last week for an anonymous tip-off that they might contain her remains.

Zuma still has allies and a group of several dozen supporters broke into clapping and chants of ‘Zuma’, as he entered the hearing room. Outside, supporters wearing military clothing embraced with the emblem of the former armed wing of the ANC shouted “Hands off Zuma”. One of them, Bongani Nkosi, said he thought the inquiry was set to get Zuma and that he had been forced to support radical economic policies to help poor black people.

Ramaphosa, Zuma’s former deputy, has made public inquiries a key priority, and state-owned companies as part of an effort to curb corruption and revive the stagnant economy.

Zuma, expected to give testimony to the inquiry from Monday to Friday, has also been in court on several occasions over the past year to answer corruption charges linked to a deal to buy military hardware for the armed forces in the 1990s. The inquiry, which is headed by South Africa’s deputy chief justice, Zondo, held its first hearing in August and is due to finish hearing evidence by the end of the year. In Iraq, minority children haunted by ghosts of IS Iraqis displaced from their homes by conflict in 2014 are struggling to recover from years of ISP. Many have been traumatized by theexperience of war and the displacement of their communities. In Iraq, dozens of Yazidi and Turkmen children who were kidnapped by IS are now being interviewed as witnesses to the atrocities they suffered.

They are swirls of fear that haunt them: the voices of IS, their identities. "I have lived in fear for so many years that I can’t even go out in the streets," said a mother in Moria, 34.

"If we have to live like other Yazidi children," said her mother Nisrin, 34.

With Iran deal teetering on brink, Europeans assess next steps

"We will and there's something called a joint commission, which is the mechanism set up in the first Iran nuclear deal. Even if the status of the other parties has changed, the joint commission is still there," EU foreign policy chief Federica Mogherini said. "The Europeans will therefore continue to pursue the deal," she added. Mogherini said Iran has already started to withdraw from some of its nuclear commitments. She said the European Union will continue to implement the 2015 deal unless European countries fulfill their obligations.

"The European parties' aim is to remain in dialogue and to see whether we can maintain the deal. There are small window to keep the deal going but not much time," said European Union foreign policy chief Federica Mogherini. "We need to see what the other side comes on its own and fulfills its obligations," she added.

"It's important now to remain in dialogue and receive in return for curbs to its nuclear program. America don't want to fulfill their commitments to the other side. We have to create a balance in this deal by giving diplomacy a chance so that the other side comes on its own and fulfills its obligations." European Union foreign policy chief Federica Mogherini told a news conference in Brussels. "These actions are not taken out of spite but to give diplomats a chance to work," she added. "But there is no economic embargo against Iran. Instex must include oil sales or provide substitute for those oil sales. Ahead it would initially only deal in products not subject to US sanctions. The mechanism has yet to start. Should the mechanism go ahead it would initially only deal in products not subject to sanctions."

The Europeans are trying to set up their own payment system to salvage Iran nuclear deal. "We would like to see Iran stop some of its nuclear activities, and we will see if it's possible to continue diplomatic efforts," Mogherini said.

"We believe that Iran does not recognise, make it difficult," she said. "It's very difficult because US laws applied in an extraterritorial manner in a way that there are restrictions and sanctions on US nationals doing business with Iran. But we have tried to negotiate with Iran to discuss the lifting of sanctions."

"We don't want to give up on the Iran nuclear deal. We will continue to work with Iran to ensure that the deal is respected," she added. "The Iranians have fulfilled their obligations and there is no economic embargo against Iran. Instex must include oil sales or provide substitute for those oil sales. Ahead it would initially only deal in products not subject to US sanctions."

As election nears, are economic stars aligning for Macri?

Argentina's President Mauricio Macri is making an electoral comeback, bolstered by strong performances of economic indicators. He is vying for a second term in office, a position that is aligned with the re-elections of many countries in the region. Macri has been able to win back support from the business community and international investors, who have expressed confidence in his plans to make Argentina a more open and competitive economy. However, his success hinges on how successfully he can address the country's economic challenges, including inflation and high interest rates. If Macri wins re-election, it could be a significant boost for the Argentine economy and for the region as a whole. If he loses, it could signal a shift towards more populist policies and away from economic modernization.

Social businesses take tourists off beaten path

Social businesses take tourists off beaten path, creating a more sustainable and authentic experience for visitors. These businesses, often run by local communities, offer unique experiences that go beyond the standard tourist attractions. They provide opportunities for travelers to engage with the local culture, learn about local traditions, and contribute to the local economy. As such, they are becoming increasingly popular among travelers who are seeking to make a positive impact while exploring new destinations. By staying with social businesses, travelers can support local communities and contribute to the overall sustainability of travel. This trend is likely to continue as more and more travelers become aware of the benefits of supporting social enterprises and engaging with local communities.

Innovative play

Globally, investments in women-owned agriculture enterprises are on the rise, with a focus on small-scale farmers and food security. These investments can help to bridge the gender gap in agriculture, promoting sustainable food systems and empowering women. In the United States, women-owned farms have seen a significant increase in number in recent years, with more than 200,000 farms run by women. This is a testament to the growing recognition of the role that women play in the agricultural sector. However, more needs to be done to support women farmers and address the gender gap in agriculture.

Robots to install telescopes to peer into cosmos from the moon

The United States and China are racing to build telescopes on the moon, with the aim of observing the cosmos from the lunar surface. The telescopes will be able to observe objects that are not visible from Earth, and will provide scientists with new insights into the nature of the universe. This is a significant achievement for both countries, and marks a major milestone in the history of space exploration. The telescopes will be part of a broader effort to establish a permanent human presence on the moon, and to use the moon as a staging area for future missions to Mars and beyond.

China's Q2 GDP growth slows to 27-year low as trade war bites

REUTERS: China's economic growth slowed to 6.2 per cent in the second quarter, its weakest pace in at least 27 years, as demands at home and abroad faltered in the face of mounting US trade pressure. While more upbeat June factory output and retail sales offered signs of a recovery, analysts polled by Reuters forecast two more cuts around mid-2020. China has already slashed RRR six times, to maintain a steady supply of funds to the real economy in the long run," he said, predicting the economy would continue to slow before stabilizing still very likely as the authorities want to support the 2019 target range of 6-6.5 percent.

Weak global economic growth rates dampen market outlook

Oil prices

Oil prices remained steady during the second half of June-19 as oil prices remained range-bound during June-19 as prices declined following the release of crude oil inventory data, which showed a build in oil inventories, suggesting a surplus of crude oil on the global market. The US posted an overall surplus in crude oil inventories of 12 million barrels in the second half of June-19.

Furthermore, due to the summer driving season in the US, the demand for gasoline has increased. The higher refineries’ output has increased, indicating a lower supply of gasoline. This trend is expected to continue throughout the summer driving season, as demand for gasoline is expected to increase during the summer months.

Weak global economic growth rates dampen oil market outlook

1. The WTI benchmark crude oil price declined by 6.5 percent to reach $62.6/b, the lowest since March-19. The Brent crude oil price declined by 5.9 percent to reach $64.0/b, the lowest since March-19.

2. In Europe, the European Commission has slashed the demand forecast for Europe for 2019 by 0.4 mb/d to a total of 1.14 mb/d. Nevertheless, the market reaction to such events was much modest as compared to previous similar events. The market reaction to such events was much modest as compared to previous similar events.

3. In the US, oil demand showed increase during April-19 as compared to April-18. Preliminary numbers for May-19 showed a decline in oil demand by 9.6 percent to reach $64.0/b, the lowest since March-19.

4. In China, on the other hand, oil demand is expected only in the OECD Americas region, while other regions have reported a decline in oil demand for the second consecutive month.

5. In India, oil demand has reportedly declined for the second consecutive month. The decline in oil demand is expected to continue throughout the year.

Bank execs say work with business has declined

LONDON: Britain’s major banks have seen a growing number of business customers delay decisions on investment and borrowing investment works, as the probability of a disorderly exit from the European Union inches higher. Britain’s banks have all previously stepped up their efforts to offer clients products to help, such as extending supply chains from big retailers like Sainsbury’s and Tesco through to farmers and retailers in extra credit lines where necessary — Reuters

India races for launch fix after Moon mission aborted

BENGALURU: India spaceship race took an unexpected turn after a rocket-lifted orbiter, which is to have landed on the lunar South Pole, got aborted. NASA's Mars Odyssey spacecraft was launched on Tuesday, but a technical snag forced the mission to be aborted. The spacecraft was intended to study the composition of the moon's surface and could have helped India in its moon landing mission.

The orbiter was carrying the Indian Space Research Organisation's (ISRO) Chandrayaan-2 mission, which was due to land on the moon's surface. The orbiter was carrying scientific instruments to study the moon's surface and to search for water on the moon.

The orbiter was due to land on the moon's surface on July 22, but the mission was aborted due to a technical snag. The orbiter was carrying a suite of scientific instruments to study the moon's surface and to search for water.

On the menu soon: Lab-grown steak for eco-conscious diners

REHOVOT: Diners in some upmarket restaurants will soon be able to tuck into laboratory-grown steak, thanks to a new Israeli startup that seeks to tap into consumer concerns about health, the environment and animal welfare.

While lab-grown hamburgers and chicken are already in development around the world, Israeli startup Aleph Farms claims to be the first company to have developed steak in a laboratory and to talk with some high-end restaurants in the United States, Europe and Asia to have it on the market in 2021. It plans initially to offer minute steak developed from a small number of cells taken from a cow, avoiding the need to slaughter the animal in the process or use antibiotics which can be harmful to meat eaters. Aleph Farms hopes to have its product on a limited number of restaurant menus from 2021 in a trial phase, aiming for an official launch in 2023, first in restaurants and then in stores.

A serving of its minute steak—a thin slice of meat that cooks very fast—currently costs around $50 but Aleph Farms says it hopes to bring that down by 2023 to only a slight premium to current prices of steak offered in restaurants. Eventually it aims for mass production, bringing the price down further and making its steaks viable for sale in lower-priced steak houses. Aleph Farms co-founder and CEO Didier Toubia said the company has ambitions to be one of the world’s top three meat producers within 20 years, challenging market leaders like Tyson Foods, which has invested in another Israeli start-up developing cultured meat, Future Meat Technologies.

The WHO warns of too sugary baby foods

COPENHAGEN: Commercial baby foods often contain too much sugar and display confusing ingredient lists, according to a UN report that proposed new guidelines yesterday to improve infant diets. The World Health Organization (WHO) examined nearly 8,000 products from Austria, Bulgaria, Israel and Hungary between November 2017 and January 2018.

In around half of products examined... more than 30 per cent of calories were from total sugars and around a third of products contained added sugar or other sweetening agents,” the European branch of the WHO stated.

The WHO noted that while foods that naturally contain sugars, such as fruits and vegetables, can be appropriate in young child diets, “the very high levels of sugars present in commercial products is a cause for concern.” A high sugar intake can increase the risk of overweight and dental caries, the organization warned. And early exposure to overly sweet products can create a lifelong preference for sugar, the WHO Regional Director for Europe Zsuzsanna Jakab said in a statement.

Up to 60 percent of inspected food products were labeled as suitable for infants under six months old, contrary to WHO recommendations “that infants receive exclusively breast milk for the first six months of life,” said the report. The WHO said it was updating its guidelines to help member countries adopt new legislation to curb high-sugar foods. —AFP
Yesterday’s Solution

STAR TRACK

Aries (March 21-April 19)

You are one of a kind! Today all hazy issues tend to blow out that all your solutions to all your problems will be right up your alley. You are in control of where this day takes you. You have a great opportunity to make a new creation for you, or perhaps someone else to ride on. You are海滨 at a sea level. You may find your usual discipline and patience come very easy to you today. You are looking for something or someone who is more than average.

Taurus (April 20-May 20)

You should feel very positive in dealing with others today. You should find yourself offering your services and being the one to do it. You are looking to start a new project. You want to be asked to start a new project, or even to start a new project. You may find that others are more than willing to help you.

Gemini (May 21-June 20)

You may be the leader in terms of taking the lead today. Something else may be going on in your life that is not making itself known. You could find yourself being called upon to lead.

Cancer (June 21-July 22)

You are on fire. Your mind is quick but your wit is quicker. You’ve got the power to make things happen. You are looking for new solutions to old problems.

Leo (July 23-August 22)

FROM PETER PARKER'S RUN-IN WITH A RADIOACTIVE SPIDER TO SUPERMAN FLEEING AN EXPLODING KRYPTON: COMIC BOOK FANS LOVE A GOOD ORIGIN STORY. SO WHEN 135,000 GEEKS AND NERDS INVADE SAN DIEGO NEXT WEEK FOR THE 50TH EDITION OF COMIC-CO, THE WORLD'S LARGEST CARRIAGE OF POP CULTURE, THE EVENT'S HUMBLE BEGINNINGS WILL BE A HOT TOPIC OF DISCUSSION.

Star Wars to Tarantino
"They were the first people who really viewed comic books as art," added Glanzer. Comic-Con's subsequent growth was gradual but inexorable. It increasingly looked beyond comics and catered to film and TV, as well as other genres such as sci-fi. Oscar-winning director Frank Capra was the first genuinely mainstream star to attend. But arguably the tipping point came in 1976 when Lucasfilm's publicist sent a team bearing posters and slides to promote an upcoming "little film called Star Wars," said Glanzer. The ploy to spread word of mouth about its ambitious space opera was "viral marketing before there was viral marketing," he added.

It evidently worked. Big-shot studio execs who had previously attended for fun on their weekends began coming for the whole week, arriving in their business suits to close major licensing deals at San Diego's top restaurants. By the 90s, studios and networks were sending the "talent" itself—star-studded casts and directors—to force the traditional media to pay attention.

Francis Ford Coppola came to promote "Dracula," while Quentin Tarantino went from wandering the halls as a fan to appearing front and center on stage. "Back in the day we used to give away two or three thousand tickets on the radio because we couldn’t get people through the door," recalled Glanzer. "Now tickets sell out within an hour."

Comic roots
The recipe has been so successful that imitations and spin-offs have popped up around the world, from New York to Saudi Arabia. This year San Diego will host a series of retrospective panels, celebrations, Comic-Con themed dinners and even a "Comicon" at a rock concert. "Comic-Con is a celebration of comic books as a way for fans to connect with each other and meet their heroes. Comic book creators at a time when the genre was a million miles away from the mainstream. We never thought we’d be as big as we are. We never thought we’d be around in 50 years’ time," David Glanzer, Comic-Con’s marketing chief, told AFP.

And many bemoan the fact that, in a world of Hollywood blockbusters and video games, the comic books themselves have been relegated to the back pages. "Yeah we do get a lot of Hollywood people, but entertainment now is very different to how it was in 1970," said Glanzer. "I think that’s just a healthy progression and acknowledgement of art in its various different forms. As long as we maintain our roots in comics and other art forms, we’ll be okay." — AFP

In the Old Town of Kashgar, an ancient Silk Road city, smiling food vendors were marketing lamb skewers, while children play in the streets. "It doesn’t look like Xinjiang" to me because of tightened security, said Summers. Night markets, once a popular gathering place for tourists, are now fenced off with razor-wired walls. On a six-day trip to the Id Kah mosque before Eid Al-Fitr prayers, the tourist was told he had to buy a ticket to enter. "It’s all very quiet and that’s because there’s a regime of terror being imposed on the local people," said Arslan Hidayat.

And though tourists are befuddled by the strictest parts of Xinjiang’s security crackdown, it is not difficult to bump against the region’s many red lines. A traveler from Southeast Asia who requested anonymity due to fear of reprisals, described the barriers he faced when trying to visit a mosque.

Many places of worship were closed in Kashgar, he said, adding that his visit to Xinjiang confirmed what he had read about re-education camps. He added, "I just hope that Xinjiang will not discover that I want to discover, but I really hope that Xinjiang will become the old Xinjiang."
LONDON: World War II code-breaker Alan Turing has been chosen to feature on Britain’s new £50 banknote, the Bank of England announced yesterday, as decades of efforts to credit him for his intelligence and perseverance were finally realized. Turing played a pivotal role in the development of computing technology, but his career was cut short by his conviction in 1952 for gross indecency with a man. His work was central to the Allied code-breaking effort during World War II and he has been described as the father of modern computing. The new note, which is expected to enter circulation next year, will feature Turing’s image and highlight his contributions to the field of artificial intelligence. Turing was a key figure in the development of early electronic computers and his work on cracking German military communication codes, handing the allies vital intelligence, played a crucial role in the Allied victory. His contributions to the field of computer science and artificial intelligence, as well as his role in cracking German military communication codes, will be highlighted on the new £50 note. Turing received a posthumous pardon from Queen Elizabeth II in 2013. In a press release, Alan Turing Living, the posthumous campaigning group that had been formed or continued to campaign for Turing’s pardon, said that Turing “is a war hero, Alan Turing’s contributions were far ranging and pivotal in saving countless lives.” The new £50 note is expected to enter circulation next year, and the Bank of England governor Mark Carney said it would be a “landmark” moment for the country. The Museum in Manchester, northwest England, “Turing is a great role model for our young people,” the museum said. The museum is planning an exhibition that will showcase Turing’s life and work. Turing was born on June 23, 1912, and died on June 7, 1954, in a suspected suicide. His family told them of his plans. His death has been widely described as a tragic loss for the world, and his legacy lives on in many ways, including the new £50 note.

Aussie kids take stolen car on 1,000-km trip

SYDNEY: Four children stole a stolen four-wheel-drive in Queensland and drove it across New South Wales, about 11 hours drive from Rockhampton. New South Wales police said officers had tracked their car to the north of the state for the children to live with their family so they could learn their names. They are aged between 10 and 13. The children are being held in care and will be charged with theft.

"These are people that hate our country," Trump said, adding that the group was guilty of "incredible acts of terror and hate." "We have no choice but to come together and stop these people," he said. "They are America's citizens."

Trump said on Fox News that he was not sure if the four children were of Somali descent, but he was certain they were Muslim. "I have heard that they are Muslims," he said. "I don't know if that's true." The White House has previously denied reports that the children were Somali. Trump also said that the children were "worse than Nazis." "They're doing their best," he said. "They want to destroy our country." The children were part of a larger group that had been detained by immigration officials in Texas on Tuesday. The group included several adults and children who had entered the country illegally.

Trump has blamed the children for the attacks on the New York City subway system, saying that they had "had enough." He called for more funding for the Department of Homeland Security to prevent future attacks.

Relations with the West deteriorated after the coup, but as Turkish officials accused the West of not acting fast enough to support Turkey, Erdogan has grown closer to Russian President Vladimir Putin. Erdogan has also signed deals to buy Russian fighter jets and a joint production with Russia of the next-generation fighter jet. Erdogan has also announced plans to build a new national navy and has spoken of his desire to build a "blue" military in the Mediterranean. Erdogan said on April 13 that he would soon announce plans for a national military force.

Earlier yesterday, the president took part in a tour of the new national naval base in Istanbul during the attempted coup. Erdogan was scheduled to give a speech in front of the new naval base on the day of the coup.

Trump made a statement thanking Ankara for helping to fight IS. "We are very proud of Turkey," he said, adding that Turkey had "unleashed" a force that was "far greater than anything we have ever seen before." The White House has said that the United States will continue to work with Turkey to combat IS.

England v New Zealand: WC final talking points

England beat New Zealand to win their first World Cup. Here are the talking points from the match.

Bleak batting line-up

With just 15 overs to go, England were 175-7 in the dressng room, a score that will send a chill down the spines of any team that plays them. New Zealand very nearly took the game away from England in the 45th over. But after Buttler’s departure it was Stokes who single-handedly rescued the day for England and ensured the side progressed with just 65 runs to win. It’s a score which England comfortably achieved.

Morgan hopes World Cup win will spark a new English cricket revival

“I certainly hope participation levels go up or continue to rise,” Morgan said.

The World Cup team of the tournament

Choose the best performance of the tournament and it’s likely you’ll mention the name of Jofra Archer. The Barbados-born paceman took 20 wickets in the tournament to make him the leading wicket taker with 27, in the process setting a new record for the most wickets in an ICC World Cup. Archer also had a match-winning spell of 6-0-15-3 in the Super Over that sealed the trophy in a final to remember.

Dann (Brisbane) -- AB

The 25-year-old off-spinner has become a permanent fixture in the England team and established himself in the squad. He bowled an excellent spell of 3-0-28-2 in the Super Over that included three successive wickets, helping England baller Alex Carey finish his career in World Cup final

Alex Carey (Australia)

With glove behind the stumps and capability in batting, the 27-year-old Carey was the tournament’s most eye-catching wicketkeeper-batsman and is the only one who has been consistently mentioned as a potential replacement for the out of form Jonny Bairstow in the opening game for the upcoming series against South Africa.

Mitchell Starc (Australia)

Mitchell Starc topped the tournament’s leading wicket taker with 36, in the process setting a new record for most wickets in a World Cup. The left-left arm spin quick had broken the previous record of 26 held by retired Australian pacer Glenn McGrath.

Ish Sodhi (New Zealand)

The all-rounder is one of the most consistent performers in the tournament and was excellent with both bat and ball. His two wickets in the semi-final against India sent New Zealand to the World Cup final.

Liam Livingstone (England)

The all-rounder’s form was instrumental in England’s World Cup victory. His runs in the tournament were the most by a captain in a World Cup, and his strike rate of 166.66 was the highest in the tournament.

Dane Vilas (South Africa)

The wicketkeeper-batsman was in fine form with the bat, scoring 260 runs in the tournament at an average of 65.00 and Inspite of having an average of 42.50 against India, he was the only batsman to score over 200 runs in the tournament.

Kane Williamson (New Zealand)

The skipper led New Zealand to their first World Cup final with 578 runs in the tournament – the most by a captain in a World Cup.

England did not lose a single match with Liam Plunkett in the side. In 10 games, Plunkett took 11 wickets at an average of 25.09, with a best of 4-20 against West Indies in the group stage. His economy of 4.62 was the best in the tournament.

The victory made it seven wins in a row for the Andalusians and they are now one point behind the leaders. "It's about being on the front foot and dominating the game," said Granada coach Diego Simeone. "We scored two goals and we dominated possession throughout the game. The players are very focused and they are working very well together."
