Kuwait continues efforts to resolve Gulf crisis: Jarrah

SPRING: Foreign affairs minister Anas Al-Jabrah stressed yesterday continuous Kuwaiti efforts to resolve the Gulf crisis. “We hope that the crisis could be continued thanks to efforts spent by His Highness the Amir Sheikh Sabah Al-Ahmad Al-Jabah Al-Sabah in this regard.” Jarrah said on the sidelines of the 16th Asian Cooperation Dialogue (ACD) meeting held in Doha, Qatar.

“Such notable participation of Gulf countries in the ACD meeting is a positive sign that we are locating in the right direction,” Jarrah pointed out. “The meeting was an opportunity to discuss the cooperation and coordination that would enable us to enhance the economic and security relations between the countries. We hope that the meeting would enter into a phase of cooperation to achieve the future vision that this sector would enter.” Jarrah also said on the sidelines of the 16th Asian Cooperation Dialogue meeting in Doha that Kuwait’s role in the ACD meeting is to achieve a stable region, and noted that the ACD meeting as a “road map” that would bring together representatives from the largest and most populous continent in the world.

In this context, the State of Kuwait organized a second workshop for sustainable development in March 2018 with the participation of officials from member states and international organizations, he said, adding the gathering as a chance for the exchange of experiences and the cooperation among countries. “We are required to work for promoting the mechanism which is deemed the only forum that gathers representatives from all regions for discussing and joining action, he noted. He described the Asian continent bears the brunt of the continent in the world. The meeting was an opportunity to discuss the cooperation and coordination that would enable us to enhance the economic and security relations between the countries. Kuwait inaugurates massive causeway to free trade zone

KUWAIT: Kuwait yesterday inaugurated one of the world’s longest causeways, linking the oil-rich Gulf state’s capital to an uninhabited border region set to become a major free trade hub. The 36-kilometre (22-mile) bridge connects Kuwait City to the northern desert area of Subbiya, where Kuwait aims to create the ‘Silk City’ project linking the Gulf to central Asia and Europe.

The Sheikh Jaber Al-Ahmad Causeway, named after late ruler Sheikh Jaber Al-Ahmad Al-Sabah, spans 90 kilometres (56 miles), three-quarters of it over water. It cuts the driving time between Kuwait City and Subbiya, close to both Iraq and Iran, from 90 minutes to less than half an hour.

Investment in the Silk City project is expected to top $100 billion, and a 5,000-megawatt power plant has already been built in Subbiya.

The $3.6 billion causeway, designed by Paris-based engineering and consulting group Systra, took five years to build. The work was carried out by a consortium led by South Korea’s Hyundai Engineering and Construction Company along with Kuwait’s Combined Group Contracting Company.

The opening ceremony was attended by His Highness the Amir Sheikh Sabah Al-Ahmad Al-Jaber Al-Sabah along with South Korean Prime Minister Lee Nak-yeon, and the leader of the French Senate Gerard Larcher. Lee Nak-yeon said the causeway would establish Kuwait as an international trade center. — AFP

AKP's alliance with nationalists failed to deliver main cities

AKP-MHP: A month after local elections which saw AKP lose control of Turkey's two largest cities, Ankara and Istanbul, ruling Erdogan's Islamist-rooted party and the small nationalist Movement Party (MHP) are questioning an alliance with nationalist parties an electoral strategy they had hoped would power them to national power in 2023. It has dominated Turkish politics ever since.

But the deal failed to prevent the accident-prone People's Party (CHP), which had run as an opposition contender with another smaller opposition party winning the mayoralty in both cities, ending a quarter-century of control by the AKP and its Islamist predecessors. The AKP is still looking for new partners - a significant challenge after Erdogan's blistering criticism of his nationalist ally.

AKP officials say it has delivered limited help them win a majority of votes nationally, Ankara and Istanbul prompting sharp public criticism, arguing it would reward him for war crimes and media restrictions and the damage he said it had done to the separation of powers and Turkey's institutions.

Since the election, Erdogan has appeared to weaken the significance of the MHP-granting to it in 7 percent share of the vote. Ballot said the remarks were “unfair and unjust”, saying that the AKP was looking after the interests of its three largest cities. Another AKP official said the MHP's 71-year-old leader had been an unpredictable ally. The AKP’s senior official said that if Turkey's electoral system had not been changed, the AKP would have emerged in public, the national party would not have the vote and that the AKP would have asked to call the AKP as People’s Alliance.

Another AKP official said that while differences with the AKP were emerging in public, the national party was becoming noticeable now. since in France, the pontiff has been more inclusive and less condemning. A recent statement to a new magazine, called "Vatican News," the Pope emphasized the importance of reaching out to all people, especially those who are marginalized or excluded.

The letter also mentioned a separate bibliography, which includes dozens of footnotes, that the Pope has made available on the letter, allowing readers to further explore the papal perspective.

The letter explicitly invites people to join an on-line signature drive to support the Pope's initiatives. The letter's aim is to invite support for the Pope's efforts to foster unity and understanding, and to address the challenges facing the Church today.

The letter was published on Tuesday by LifeSiteNews, a well-known conservative website. The letter was also accompanied by a video document of the Pope's efforts so far for the French media.

In another letter dated February 12, the pope declared that "the pluralism and diversity of the Church are to be encouraged," and that "the Church offers a space of dialogue and encounter, allowing the decision whether the person can be fully restored to full communion unless they abstain from sex with their new partner.

This letter was particularly strong in its condemnation of the current state of affairs within the Church, and its call for the restoration of full communion with the Church's tradition and teachings.

The letter was widely praised by conservative Catholics, who praised the Pope for his "theological gifts," and for his strong message of condemnation and correction.

The Vatican's official website, Vatican News, confirmed that the Pope had written the letter, and that it would be made available on the website for further reading.

The letter was also broadcast in March on a French television channel, Arte, and has been widely sold internationally.

It is broadcast quite some time after Pope Francis admitted that some recent private letters had sounded as "sexual signals," and that the Vatican had had a duty to be forthright about Pope Francis's actions.

The Vatican's women's magazine, Women Church Week, also reported that some mice had been incensed into their housing mounts.

This also happened to Pope Francis, back in the day of his youth. This fact makes the Pope even more the executive leader.
As Trump makes Mideast plan, Palestinians face financial crisis

Palestinian leadership suffers series of financial blows

RAMALLAH — Israel and the United States are putting the friction between the two countries on a new level. Palestinians are now facing a financial crisis, as the Trump administration has announced a cut in annual US aid, which threatens the ongoing Palestinian Authority's plans to achieve peaceful solutions.

Financial crisis:

Khalil al-Hariri, the Palestinian finance minister, recently announced that the US aid cut could lead to a financial crisis in the Palestinian Authority. He said that the cut would result in a loss of approximately $1 billion in 2019, putting further strain on an economy that is already struggling.

The Palestinian Authority relies on US aid for a significant portion of its budget, which includes salaries for government employees, infrastructure projects, and other essential services. The cut in aid could lead to a decrease in these services, further straining the economy.

US aid cuts:

President Donald Trump has announced that the US will cut its annual aid to the Palestinian Authority by 90%, starting this year. The move is expected to have a significant impact on the Palestinian Authority's ability to manage its budget and provide essential services.

US aid cuts, tax dispute fuel crisis:

The Palestinian Authority has already requested emergency funding from the United Nations to help it manage its budget in the face of the aid cut. The Authority has also announced that it will impose sanctions on those who support the US aid cut.

Rivalry over US aid:

The Trump administration's decision to cut US aid to the Palestinian Authority is expected to spark a rivalry over US aid between the United States and Israel. The move is seen as an attempt by the Trump administration to put pressure on the Palestinian Authority to make concessions on issues such as recognition of Israel as a Jewish state.

Exports sag, UK factories report lower stockpiles boost

LONDON: British factories lost some of the boost from pre-distruction stockpiling last month, while householders slowed their borrowing ahead of the original deadline for the country's departure from the European Union, data showed yesterday. The ISM Markit/PMI manufacturing Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI) dropped to 53.4 in April from March's high of 55.1, briefly in line with the post-Brexit vote fall to 51.9 in March 2016. Exports fell by 3% in April to their lowest level since January 2017, and the smaller increase in stockpiles this month is likely to weigh on GDP growth this quarter, said the office for National Statistics.

Uncertainty around the timing of Britain's exit from the EU, originally scheduled for March but doomed by recent Parliament elections, continued to weigh on business activity. Exports fell 1.3% in April and the resulting lower growth rate is likely to weigh on GDP growth this quarter, said the office for National Statistics.

The services sector was the only one to report an expansion in April, with the sector index rising from 53.2 in March to 53.7, beating expectations.

The service sector's positive performance was seen as a sign of increased confidence in the economy, as the country prepares for a potential no-deal Brexit on October 31.

New orders also increased in April, with the new orders index rising from 51.7 in March to 52.5, indicating a strong growth in new business in the coming months.

Labour market conditions also improved, with the employment index rising from 51.6 in March to 51.9, indicating a slight increase in employment in the service sector.

The strong performance of the service sector, along with the positive outlook for new orders and employment, is likely to support the economy in the coming months.
SAN FRANCISCO: China-based Blueread outsold Apple’s iPhones in the first quarter of the year, sending the California company’s second spot in a tightening smartphone market dominated by Samsung, a trade body said on Thursday.

Apple had a challenging first quarter, with iPhone shipments dropping by a staggering 38.2 percent from a year earlier to 56 million units, IDC reported. The company was still able to grow its revenues by 15 percent to $58 billion, according to the analyst group, but US conglomerate $9 billion in the first quarter of this year, seizing the California company’s second place spot in a tightening smartphone market, which has been a company-wide multi-year trend.

US may push for quick, narrow trade deal with Japan

WASHINGTON: The United States may push for a quick trade deal with Japan to gain the same access to agricultural markets as some other Japanese trade partners, such as Korea, if the United States was in a deal with Japan by the time it has to exit talks with Tokyo, US Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer said on Thursday.

He said US Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer said that the US Trade Representative, Robert Lighthizer, would like to complete a deal with Japan by the time he has to exit talks with Tokyo.

Lighthizer is in Japan to finalize trade talks with Japan on agricultural issues, much of it from auto exports - and wants a two-way agreement to address those US concerns. The US has long argued that Japanese automakers produce many vehicles in the United States, according to a report of their meeting provided by the US ambassador to Japan on Saturday. The US wants a narrow deal that could expand later into a more comprehensive trade agreement.

“We want a quick resolution of our agricultural dispute here... maybe temporarily that could then be followed on within longer period,” Lighthizer told reporters. He added if Japan’s government said that it was signing on to the US-led trade deal, Trump walked over from his seat in his presence, saying it was a bad deal for the US economy and workers. — Reuters

Huawei jumps ahead of Apple in tough smartphone market

Chinese smartphone maker Huawei jumped past Apple as the world’s second-largest smartphone maker for the first time in the first quarter of the year, IDC said on Thursday.

The results reflect Huawei’s expanded sales to Europe and the Middle East to offset weak shipments in China, where Huawei sees only limited growth to sell out to dollar upgrade,” said IDC Research Analyst Anthony Spyrellis.

Huawei, meanwhile, weighed in with 50.3 percent growth in global smartphone shipments, IDC said. The firm sold 21.1 million smartphones in the quarter, up from 14 million units in the same period last year, IDC reported. Apple delivered a 6.6 percent decline from the same period in 2018, pre- dicting 36.4 million units, IDC reported. A total of 310.8 million smartphones were shipped globally during the first three months of this year, IDC said.

Apple had a challenging first quarter, with iPhone shipments dropping by a staggering 38.2 percent from a year earlier to 36 million units, IDC reported. The company was still able to grow its revenues by 15 percent to $58 billion, according to the analyst group, but US conglomerate $9 billion in the first quarter of this year, seizing the California company’s second place spot in a tightening smartphone market, which has been a company-wide multi-year trend.

Planes grounded as thousands in Argentina strike against government

Buenos Aires: Tens of thousands of Argentines demonstrated in a partial strike that grounded all flights and shut banks and other businesses to protest the economic policies of President Mauricio Macri. “I came here to protest because I can’t manage on the salary,” one demonstrator said. The strike, called by opposition parties, is a sign of the deep discontent with Macri’s administration.

In an effort to reduce the state deficit, the government last year launched an austerity plan that has cut services and raised taxes. Unemployment is increasing, poverty now affects 32 percent of the population and 41 percent of children, according to the IMF.

US private sector surges in April: ADP

WASHINGTON: US private sector employment surged in April, the ADP National Institute for Business Research said Tuesday, adding 52,000 employees after a record 271,000 in March. The strong jobs report comes against the backdrop of unease over the possibility of a US-China trade war and uncertainty about the Fed’s policy stance.

The ADP said US private sector employment rose a seasonally adjusted 271,000 in March, the strongest gain since February 2012. It was the second straight month with growth above 200,000.

In April, the gain of 52,000 was impressive but was not as strong as March’s.

FREETOWN: With a single deep-sea patrol boat, Sierra Leone was hard put to stop vessels looting its waters despite a month-long ban on industrial fishing. Dozens of large foreign trawlers are licensed to fish in Sierra Leonean waters and the aim of the ban, which expired Tuesday, was to help replenish species damaged by overfishing. But those arrested were local people charged with using illegal nets or trying to export fish.

"We have one offshore patrol vessel, two operational inflatable boats, and five inshore patrol craft," said Abdul Karim Dumbaya, operations chief for the west African country's Joint Maritime Commission (JMC) linking eight government agencies. About 100 visiting trawlers have fishing permits. More than half of them are Chinese boats, beyond the reach of inspections.

"If we had more than one offshore patrol vessel, then we would have the flexibility of tasking one vessel down south, and the other one up north, and one even in standby. But now we are talking about just one offshore patrol vessel. One. That is a challenge in itself," Dumbaya said. However, the JMC has introduced daily patrols, making a big difference from one outing per week.

During the ban, JMC agents apprehended three artisanal fishermen using illegal nets in Tombo, a fishing village east of the capital Freetown. They picked up three others at Bonthe in the southwest, "trying to sell fish to exporters," Dumbaya said.

"They destroyed my properties" — Manfereh Suma, a fisherwoman at the Goderich market in Freetown. "These trawlers don't give us a chance. They bankrupted my business. They destroyed my properties," said Marderik Suma, a fisherman at the Goderich market in Freetown. "I'm left with nothing. Zero."

"Only God can help us" — Senior harbor master Momoh Bangura, a fisherman for 50 years, said the depletion of fish stocks has reached critical levels. "When the trawlers began arriving in large numbers in this country in 1980, the quantity of fish began declining," he said. He spoke of zones where fish used to be abundant, but today "there is nothing left." Where we fished not so long ago, there are no longer any fish, he added.

The lack of means to monitor maritime activity went hand in hand with corruption and weak fines. — AFP

Tirana’s ‘pyramid’ puts checkerboard past behind it for new tech future

Russian Trade Unions’ members holding balloons, flags and artificial flowers parade on Fier Square during their May Day demonstration in Moscow yesterday.—AFP

For Tirana mayor Erion Veliaj, the project is a “story of resurrection” for the pyramid and Albania itself. “Since the fall of the Berlin Wall and the start of (Albania’s) transition, the resurrection—for the pyramid and Albania itself. “Since the fall of the Berlin Wall and the start of (Albania’s) transition, the question has been how do we make Albania great again?” he told AFP. The pyramid’s renovation is part of a dizzying amount of transformation that this country has undertaken in recent years. The collapse of communism unleashed economic waves of migration from rural areas to the capital, leading to uncontrolled construction, an explosion of cars and chaotic urban spaces.

As mayor of Tirana in the early 2000s, Edi Rama, who is now prime minister, gave the city a major lift by unleashing its vast potential, tearing down illegal constructions, creating more parks and recently turning a massive Skanderbeg Square traffic roundabout into a pedestrian space.

As for the pyramid, some would have preferred to see it become an archaeology museum or national library, among other things. But for Rama, the transformation of a “symbol of dictatorship” to a “symbol of each individual’s power in a democracy” is an important step.

“The pyramid will be open to everyone” and the building will be nearly “transparent”, the chief architect, Winy Maas, said at the presentation in Tirana last week. “I am happy that we have done it with a modern one.

Brazil's 'godmother of samba' Beth Carvalho dies

Brazilian singer and 'godmother of samba' Beth Carvalho, 75, has died in Brazil, her publisher and hospital said. She was 75.

Beth Carvalho, who lived for 60 years on the Mangueira samba school, a famous and emblematic school from the favelas of Rio de Janeiro, died on Thursday morning.

The statement said: "She was a great samba singer and the Mangueira school's most famous singer. She was known as the 'godmother of samba'. She was highly respected and beloved by everyone. She fought for the rights of the people and was a voice of the working class. She was a symbol of resistance and solidarity."

Carvalho was born in 1945 and began her career in the 1960s as a singer and dancer in the Mangueira samba school. She became known for her powerful voice and for her ability to express the pain and struggles of the working class.

In 2017, she began teaching about 100 cooks from the Mangueira samba school to make healthy meals with local, sometimes forgotten, grains and nuts. She had worked as a cook for Bioversity International, a Rome-based non-profit, for 20 years, and had been involved in a project to develop nutritious foods.

Carvalho was also known for her support of indigenous communities and for her work to bring attention to underutilized food species. "What we need today is a true revolution of food," she said. "We need to think of everything from the beginning. They are the ones that need us the most."

She also helped to support indigenous communities who are the custodians of traditional knowledge. "They are the ones that need us the most," she said. "We need to think of everything from the beginning. They are the ones that need us the most."

Carvalho was honored with the title of "godmother of samba" by the Mangueira samba school in 2017, and was known for her love of cooking and her commitment to health and nutrition.

Her death was announced by her publisher, who said: "Beth Carvalho, our Maestra, our Godmother, our companion, our singer, our dancer, our legend, our fighter, our dream, our hope, has left us. We will miss her voice, her passion, her energy, her light. We will miss her."

Carvalho's love for cooking and her commitment to health and nutrition had inspired many people. "She was a true revolutionary," said Stefano Padulosi, senior scientist at Bioversity International. "She was a true warrior for social justice."
I was honored to be invited to the Kuwait premiere of Avengers: Endgame by the Walla Company. Ella Fikry & VOX Cinemas (aliibaneel-praise). This means that I got to watch it before anyone else in Kuwait on April 25, 2019. I didn’t know if I was lucky or not, because for some reason I felt that I owe it to the Russo brothers to keep their secret and control my enthusiasm, intense and eager enjoyment and not spoil it for others, the true fans, who had failed to do their advance planning had to watch it after midnight. I will not write too many spoilers, but I just give a quick review of the movie. Endgame concludes the story of the six original Avengers in Marvel’s cinematic universe—Iron Man, Captain America, Black Widow, Thor, Hawkeye, and Hulk. It picks up after last year’s Infinity War left fans hanging when many of the Marvel heroes seemed destined to die at the hand of the villain Thanos, played by Josh Brolin.

Although it’s an action movie, this doesn’t mean it doesn’t have emotional scenes that will leave you in tears. In fact, Endgame was a mixture of comedy, action, and good drama. The cinematic scenes certainly did not disappoint, and lived up to the high standards we came to know and love in Marvel movies.

The only two negative comments that I have to say to the Russo brothers is that the scene where we all are supposed to die was elongated, for them to take full credit that Marvel fans were eating their feelings and crying and experiencing all the emotions of the story was a bit predictable, but can’t say it wasn’t fulfilling. I was glued to your seat, because you don’t want to miss a single scene. After all we are at the first stoping point of the Marvel Cinematic Universe. Last but not least, you should know that Avengers will do to protect their friends, and know that you have a mission not to spoil for other people who are waiting to get a ticket to watch the movie.

Here are some tips that you should prepare for the screening

1) Don’t forget to bring some tissues (I guarantee you’ll need it).
2) Don’t forget to wear the most comfortable clothes (you wear socks and a blanket is a bad idea).
3) Don’t forget to bring a lot of munchies, water and a lot of tissues.

Avengers: Endgame has broken records in all countries with sky-high crime rates. To meet the demand for tickets, fans got up before dawn and an economic crisis, fans got up before dawn to line up for hours at box offices to see the final chapter of the story that not only left me in tears, but made me say that two of my favorite characters died. Later I felt better when I read the scenes which could have made me cry. “Come on, you know that death means nothing in the comic world.” (That makes sense). The second scene was when Captain America’s Carter BRUCEBOWMAN said. Packed with superpowers, high-tech suits and stunts, there are tears and gut-punching moments, almost always a problem that the Russo brothers make up for it by their production, Avengers: Infinity War. The movie was a great $1.2 billion which included marketing costs and was expected to break even during its debut weekend, a feat unheard of for a major blockbuster.

Wordstock 50 rest under threat as investor pulls out

A highly anticipated celebration of the 50th Woodstock festival 50th anniversary appeared under threat Monday, with a primary investor of $2.3 million which was canceled as promoters behind it was still on. Contemporary heavyweights including Jay-Z, 2 Chainz, and Beyonce, were to play the anniversary weekend August 15-16 in upstate New York. Wolfeboro, NH-based Amplify Live, a firm headquartered in Los Angeles, said the promoter was facing tremendous investment of time, effort, and commitment, and had decided to cancel the festival after the Woodstock 50 theme. The festival is expected to be an event of the century, the Woodstock 50th anniversary in the United States, army and safety of the artists, partners and attendees.

An “after the fashion” consideration conducted by Billboard, Stormzy & Universes Amplify Live A producer of Woodstock 50 has decided to cancel the festival, said the statement obtained by AFP. “As difficult as it is to believe, this is the most prudent decision for all partners involved” but组织 is/deal the festival has been scrapped, according to updates by New York-based Posthumous, the news outlet that quoted them as saying “Unfortunately, without additional investments, the festival is unable to proceed.”

Woodstock promoters did not immediately respond to an AFP inquiry. Amplify Live is the investment arm of Devil’s Advocate Live, which has produced concerts and superstars. Among the many other superlatives being claimed for the festival is its potential to draw 40,000 people. The festival is expected to be an event of the century, the Woodstock 50th anniversary in the United States, army and safety of the artists, partners and attendees.

The Woodstock promoters declared: “It is with deep sadness that we announce that the Woodstock 50th anniversary festival, which had been scheduled to take place in Bethel, New York, on August 15-16, has been canceled due to financial and operational challenges. Our sincere apologies to all of our fans, artists, and partners who were looking forward to this historic event.”

At the Myanma rocket festival, which began in 1961 and is now the world’s biggest, the rockets are both a tradition and a critical source of income. People dress in their finest, donning dark tunics and homemade spinning tops, and the rockets fly high, reaching speeds of up to 400 kilometers per hour. The rockets are made of bamboo and wood, and can carry up to 400 kilograms of explosives. The festival is mainly in Shan state’s highlands, where the Pa’O ethnic people live, and is a unique cultural event that has been preserved for over 1,000 years. The festival is celebrated with a firework display, and the rockets are decorated with pictures of mystical powers, known as “weiza”.
